Mrs. Florence Carman, the woman accused of killing Mrs. Louise Bailey in a fit of jealousy; below, Elizabeth Carman, the nine-year-old daughter, whose testimony may be a strong weapon against her mother, and Ellwood T. Bardes, the insurance agent, whose evidence caused Mrs. Carman's arrest.

MRS. CARMAN BREAKS DOWN

Warburg Permits His Name to Stand

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Paul M Warburg will permit his name to go before the Senate for the Federal Reserve Board if President Wilson desires him to do so, but has not changed his determination not to appear before the Committee on Banking and Currency. Word to this effect has come to the White House. It was announced today, and the White House let it be known that President Wilson "will stand pat" on the nomination and fight for the confirmation of Warburg.

New Haven Stock Drops Here to 62

New Haven stock dropped to 62 in the Boston market today. This was a new low record, being the lowest price in the New Haven's history in the Boston Exchange. In New York the stock slumped below 62. The weakness of the stock was declared to be due to the Boston & Maine-New Haven situation and the report from Washington that the Attorney-General would soon begin suit against the New Haven.

CHERRY PICKER FELLED

A wooden boot last, thrown from a window by Rev. George L. Parker, pastor of the Broadway Congregational Church, Somerville, struck Elmer Snow, fifteen, of No. 8 Henry street, Medford. Young Snow was one of three boys picking cherries in a yard of a house adjoining the clergyman's home.

Young Snow fell to the ground, stunned. The last made two cuts on his head which were treated by a physician.

This happened last Tuesday, but the facts did not come to light until today. The clergyman declared he threw the last for the purpose of frightening the boys and had no desire of hitting Snow or either of the other lads.

"The blow was purely accidental," said Rev. Mr. Parker. "I regret the matter very much and have told the parents of the Snow boy so."

Chief of Police Kendall of Somerville talked with young Snow. The boy told the chief he din not think he was stealing the cherries.

"I don't think it is stealing to pick up cherries which are on the ground," said the boy.

The police said they would not take any action against the boy and none against the minister unless the boy's parents made the demand of them.

The case has caused a stir in the Winter Hill section of Somerville, where the clergyman lives.

Thaw Alarmed for Mother, Who Is Ill in Pittsburgh

GORHAM, N. H., July 8.—Mrs. Mary Thaw, mother of Harry K. Thaw, is ill in Pittsburgh, though not dangerously so. This information came to Harry today when a reporter called him up on the telephone to ask if the report that he was lost for thirteen hours in the woods while on a trout fishing trip was true.

"No, the report is not true," said Thaw. "I am expecting a message from Pittsburgh, where my mother is ill," he added, "and your call alarmed me. Have you heard anything from her?"

The report was circulated early today that in taking a short cut through the woods Thaw became separated from Deputy Stevens, and that a posse of farmers hunted him for thirteen hours and found him at last worn out and prostrate beside the brook.

"The only explanation I can give for the report," said Thaw, "is that about a week ago, Mr. Stevens and I took a longer trip than usual, and were late in getting home."

Narrow Escapes from Runaway Horse

Hundreds of pedestrians narrowly escaped serious injury today when a horse attached to a wagon became frightened at a passing automobile, near Ruggles, on Tremont street, and ra naway. He was stopped at Northampton street after a wild dash. Several people waiting for cars along Tremont street barely escaped being hit. The owner could not be found and no name appeared on the team.

Boston Gets a $3.25 Pig Iron Rate

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 9.—Rates of from $2.45 to $2.92 per ton on pig iron from Low Moor and other Virginia furnace points to New England and the Middle Atlantic States over the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Norfolk & Western roads today were found unreasonable by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It was held that the rates discriminate in favor of furnaces in Pennsylvania. New rates from Virginia furnaces were fixed to New York $3 and to Boston $3.25 per ton.

Brazil Contracts for a Dreadnaught

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Eng., July 9.—It was learned here today that the Brazilian government has placed orders for the construction of a new dreadnaught by a local firm to replace the battleship Rio de Janeiro, which was recently sold to a foreign power.

Meat Boycott Threat by N. Y. Women

NEW YORK, July 9.—New York club women today threatened a meat boycott if the price of that necessity is advanced any further. Mrs. Julia Heath, vice-president of the Housewives' League, declared that if the Chicago packers carry out their threat to raise the price or beef she will lead a boycott movement.

Jordan President of National Educators

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 9.—David Starr Jordan, chancellor of Leland Stanford University, today was unanimously elected president of the National Educational Association to succeed President Joseph Swain.

ACCUSED WOMAN DECLARES: "I'LL SOON BE FREE"

FREEPORT, L. I., July 9.—While her supporters here were offering to raise $100,000 bail for her, Mrs. Florence Carman in the Mineola jail under a charge of murdering Mrs. Louise Bailey in the office of her husband, Dr. Edwin Carman, today suffered a nervous breakdown.

In a hysterical burst of weeping and laughing, she called repeatedly for her mother and for her daughter, Elizabeth. "Mama! Bessie! Oh mama, I'm afraid this shock will kill you," she cried.

Dr. Guy F. Cleghorn was called in. Leaving, he said:

"I have found Mrs. Carman in a highly nervous and excitable condition, such as might be expected after her ordeal. She is suffering a nervous reaction. Her pulse was over 100. I prescribed a sedative. Her condition is not serious."

Later Mrs. Carman somewhat recovered her confidence and composure and declared she will be free within a week. To Warden Hulse, wife she said:

"I know that public opinion is against me. But I am innocent.

"The public demanded a victim, and I was unfortunate. The officials who put me here will realize their mistake.

"I am ready and willing to go before the Grand Jury and tell my whole story. I am confident no indictment will be returned against me. The grand jurors will not be swayed by public clamor as were the officials who ordered my arrest.

"I shall be very much surprised if I am not at home within a week."

CRIES OUT TO MOTHER.

Then her thoughts returned to her

ASQUITH GETS SECRETS OF THE ULSTER ARMY

LONDON, July 9.—Secret Service agents, who have been sent into Ireland by the British government to enroll themselves in the ranks of the Ulster volunteer forces in the guise of anti home-rule sympathizers, have secured invaluable information which is now in the hands of Premier Asquith.

It was learned in circles close to the War Office today that Premier Asquith is in possession of a list of the members of a secret Unionist organization in Ulster Province, who have been furnishing the money with which the 100,000 members of the Ulster volunteer forces have been equipped.

The government also has learned the secret hiding places where vast stores of arms and ammunition have been cached and has come into invaluable information relative to the gun-running operations along the northern coast.

SENATOR BRENNAN ARRESTED

Senator James H. Brennan of Charlestown was placed under arrest in Court square late yesterday for debt, it became known today. His arrest followed right on the heels of the proroguing of the Legislature. Under an old State law the Senator was immune as long as the Senate was in session.

The order for Brennan's arrest, signed by Judge Bolster, had been in the hands of Constable Edward F. Rice since last March 20. For nearly four months the constable had to pursue a policy of watchful waiting.

Finally his chance came.

The Senator was just emerging from City Hall into Court square when Rice caught sight of him.

"Hello, Senator," greeted Rice, "I want you."

"For what?" asked Brennan.

"I have an order of the court and I place you under arrest," said Rice.

Rice then showed Brennan the order. It read: "To satisfy a judgment of $53.44 on a bill for cigars and a showcase."

"Let's fix this up right here," said the Senator.

And they did. The Senator led the way into City Hall basement. There Brennan gave Rice a Commonwealth of Massachusetts check for $50 and $3.44 in cash.

"Thanks," said Rice, and he released the Senator who, after being under arrest for fifteen minutes or more, was again a free man.

The debt was one which Brennan contracted two years ago when he ran a lunchroom in Charlestown. He bought of Jesse H. Pierce the cigars and the showcase. The original bill was for $54.02.

Held for Attack on Worcester Girl

WORCESTER, July 9.—Wendell Carlson, twenty-five, was arraigned today on a charge of assault with intent to rob Miss Esther Johnson, clerk in a Worcester factory. Miss Johnson had $300 for the payroll of the factory. Carlson was discharged by the company last Friday, and had a cobblestone in a handkerchief which he is alleged to have used as a blackjack in the attack. He was held in $1,000 for the grand jury.

CARMANS ARE PAYING TERRIBLE PRICE FOR MISTAKES, DOROTHY DIX SAYS

WOMAN BREAKS DOWN AS JAIL DOORS CLANG

By DOROTHY DIX.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The story of a husband's flirtations and a wife's jealousy reached its tragic climax when Mrs. Carman was locked in the Minoola jail, charged with having killed Mrs. Louise Bailey.

Never did human folly more completely wreck the fortunes of a family than it has done in the case of the Carmans. They had all the things that make life worth living. They were young and handsome. They were well educated and intelligent. They had a beautiful home and a lovely little daughter. They had good social position, and Dr. Carman had a big and growing practice. They had all the gifts of the gods in their hands, and they threw them away.

Today the wife is in prison. Before the case is settled their fortune will be eaten up by lawyers' fees, and—saddest of all—Mrs. Carman's mother is dying from grief and shock over the whole sad affair.

What a price to pay for a man's fling and a woman's suspicions!

TOLD OF DICTAGRAPH.

The arrest of Mrs. Carman came after a day that had been replete with sensations. At the opening of the coroner's inquest the first witness had been a man who sold Mrs. Carman the dictagraph with which she kept upon her husband's patients. He told in detail of her visit to him and of how she had told him that she was jealous of her husband and wished to find out what passed between him and his female patients.

He said that during the conversation he had referred to the fact that at one time in his life he had been a detective, and that Mrs. Carman had then said that with a dictagraph she could keep tab on what her husband was doing inside of his office. And most of all, I wondered if she was saying over and over to herself what a part Judas played.

"Am I mad that I should cherish that which bears but bitter fruit.
I will pluck it from my bosom though my heart be at its root."

INSURANCE CHIEF SAYS BARDES DID NOT MENTION KILLING

NEW YORK, July 9.—Eugene H. Gates, superintendent of the Jamaica branch of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, said that Ellwood T. Bardes, whose sensational walked was just the direction Mrs. Carman would have gone if she had gone back through the kitchen and had then appeared in the waiting room ,where George Golder testified that he saw her a few minutes after the shooting, dressed just as Mr. Bardes had said she was.

The scene when Mrs. Carman was actually arrested was as dramatic and pathetic as any ever staged. It took place in Dr. Carman's office, the place of so much heart burning and jealousy on Mrs. Carman's part, and almost on the very spot where Mrs. Bailey had been shot down a little more than a week ago. Coroner Norton is an old friend of both Mrs. Carman and her husband, and as he read the order of her commitment to her tears streamed down his face.

For a minute Mrs. Carman's Spartan self-control broke, too, and she also wept, as did her husband. None of the balance of the family was in the room, but upstairs the old mother lay dying, as surely killed by the bullet that slew Mrs. Bailey as if it had entered her own heart, and about her bedside stood Mrs. Carman's old father, aged in this week as years have not aged him, and her little frightened and bewildered child.

THEN WENT TO PRISON.

And then there was the grating of an automobile's wheels on the gravel, and Mrs. Carman, who had driven over the same road so often in joy and happiness and prosperity, went over it once more to prison.

Dr. Carman accompanied his wife, and as they went up the steps of the Minoola jail together he was smiling that set property smile of his—very ruthless now, to be sure—but Mrs. Carman's face was white and set, and I wondered what she was thinking. I wondered if she was thinking how poor and paltry a thing her wounded pride and wifely sense of possession seemed now; how trivial a matter her husband's attentions to a younger and fairer woman, and to what end her suspicions had brought her. And most of all, I wondered if she was saying over and over to herself what a part Judas played.

"Am I mad that I should cherish that which bears but bitter fruit.
I will pluck it from my bosom though my heart be at its root."

INSURANCE CHIEF SAYS BARDES DID NOT MENTION KILLING

NEW YORK, July 9.—Eugene H. Gates, superintendent of the Jamaica branch of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, said that Ellwood T. Bardes, whose sensational testimony resulted in the arrest of Mrs. Florence Carman, had been in the company's employ only two or three months.

Mr. Gates did not remember the circumstances of Mr. Bardes' employment or any details about his previous business experience, but said that without good references he could not have obtained employment. He was under the impression that Mr. Bardes was living in Brooklyn at the time he went on the company's staff. Mr. Gates said that he last saw Mr. Bardes last Thursday ,and that he had heard him say nothing about the Freeport murder.

STATE'S THEORY OF KILLING OF WOMAN IN DOCTOR'S OFFICE

FREEPORT, L. I., July 9.—The State's hypothesis to explain the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, the hypothesis on which Mrs. Florence Carman was arrested, came to light today.

The State officials believe:

That Mrs. Carman jealously insisted the dictagraph.

That after seeing Mrs. Bailey enter the doctor's office she went upstairs to listen to what was said.

That something which was said was misunderstood or interpreted by her in such fashion as to inflame her jealousy.

That in a rage she rushed downstairs, out of the house, thrust the revolver through the window and fired.

Autoist Is Fined $25.

Joseph Courtere of Harden avenue, Watertown, was fined $25 in the Waltham Court today on a charge of driving an auto while under the influence of liquor.

'Guest Room,' Bath and Special Food for Mrs. Carman

Mrs. Florence Carman is not lodged in a cell at the Minoola jail.

She is in a room, eight by ten, with a bed and a bath tub. This is a space room used for guests by Warden William H. Hulse's wife.

The windows are barred, but otherwise the room might be a guest room in any private house.

Mrs. Carman is not allowed to have food from outside, but can order special dishes from the jail kitchen. Her first meal consisted of Buttered Toast.

Two Chicken Sandwiches.
A Pot of Tea.

mother, and she cried: "My poor mother! I hope this shock does not kill her."

Mrs. Carman's attorney, George N. Levy, was hard at work today routing up evidence to break down the testimony of Ellwood T. Bardes, who placed a woman answering Mrs. Carman's description near the scene of the crime, and whose evidence led to Mrs. Carman's arrest. He said:

"I am going to ask that Mrs. Carman may tell her story to the Grand Jury. I am confident that she is innocent, or I would never make this request. It is the first time in the history of Nassau County that a defendant ever asked to go before the Grand Jury.

"If I were not satisfied that Mrs. Carman is the victim of misdirected energy, we would never make such a move.

"I will riddle Bardes' story. He has told others greatly varying from this latest one."

EXACT TIME IMPORTANT.

It became evident today that the exact time of the murder will be of importance in the case when witnesses come forward to attack Bardes' story.

Dr. Carman first placed the time of the murder at 8:23 p. m. Later, however, it appeared the murder took place almost half an hour earlier. Bardes says he was at the Carman house—or near it—"sometime between 7:45 and 8:15."

Miss Florence Raynor today declared that Bardes called at her home at 8:30 that evening and was with her till 11 o'clock, without mentioning the murder. She added a still more damaging statement.

"On the night following the murder," she declared "I was walking wit Mr. Bardes and he asked: 'Florence ,doesn't Dr. Carman live on Grove street?' I said, 'No, he lives on Merrick road. Why do you ask?' He replied: 'I thought he lived on Grove street.'

CONTRADICTIONS FOUND.

This was reported to Sheriff Fetit. He commented: "We are not trying to make a victim of anyone. We are investigating Bardes' story and find much contradictory evidence. If Mrs. Carman appears innocent, we certainly shall not try to fasten the thing on her."

The actual possibility that Mrs. Carman may soon be released was confirmed today by District Attorney Smith's assistant, Attorney Weeks. Mr. Weeks said:

"There is a possibility that Mrs. Carman may be discharged when arraigned Monday. Attorney Levy will have the right to question witnesses, and if he breaks down their testimony, Mrs. Carman may be set free."

He said the case will not be presented to the Grand Jury today, and intimated no such step would be taken till after the preliminary hearing has been held.

Mrs. Carman's friends were jubilant today at this and other news; and there were six offers to raise $100,000 to secure her freedom if she is admitted to bail. Plans are already afoot to bring William Travers Jerome into the case as counsel for Mrs. Carman. He would presumably take charge of the case and be assisted by Mr. Levy.

DOCTOR TO STAUNCH DEFENDER.

Dr. Carman, the woman's husband, said today: "My wife is absolutely innocent and will be acquitted. She may have made some foolish mistakes, but that is all. Everything will come right. I will spend every cent I have to free her.

"We are hard at work today and are bound to find out soon who fired that shot. When we do, Florence will be exonerated.

"If Florence had not mixed up with that dictograph matter her name would never have come into the case at all.

"Detective Burns added nothing to his laurels in this case. He came to us and we received him courteously and gave him all help we could till he tried to bully Mrs. Carman. Then I fired up, and after that he never came back to the house."

A development today materially strengthened Mrs. Carman's case.

One of the principal witnesses against her, George Golder, repudiated the testimony he gave at the inquest and has sworn to an affidavit that he was only guessing.

As Attorney Levy returned from Mineola jail he met along the road Golder, the farm hand who declared at the inquest that he had seen a woman on the porch near the doctor's office a few minutes before Mrs. Bailey was shot, and who identified Mrs. Carman as the woman. Levy hailed Golder roughly.

"Look here!" he shouted. "Do you know where Mrs. Carman is now?"

"In jail, I reckon," said the farmhand.

"Yes, she is," said Levy, "and you put her there. It was your testimony at the inquest."

"Oh, Lord!" said Golder. "I thought I was helping her."

"Well, it isn't too late to help her now if you can tell the truth. Did you tell the truth at the inquest?"

"Tried to, but I was guessing some. They kept after me sharp and I didn't have much time to think. Now, Mr. Levy, here's what happened. I ain't sure it was Mrs. Carman. I went to the doctor's office at 7 o'clock that night and I saw an old lady and a younger one in a white dress on the porch.

What Cadum Is Made Of

Cadum, the well-known remedy for Eczema and other skin troubles, is one of the very few preparations sold in drug stores that is not secret. A list of its ingredients is printed upon every box. One ingredient is oil of cade, which is recognized by doctors as being one of the best things known for Eczema. Another ingredient is zinc oxide, which dries up the water that forms upon sore places on the skin. Two other ingredients are petrolatum and white wax, which make a covering to protect these sore spots from the air and water. A trial box of Cadum can be secured in any drug store for 25c, but it is cheaper to buy the 25c size, as it contains nearly four times as much as the 10c box.

We want you to become acquainted this week WITH THE

RUBBERSET TRADE MARK TOOTH BRUSH

Habit has made us careless of the dangers that lurk in bristle-shedding tooth brushes; of the harm that a single bristle can do when lodged in the gums, the throat or swallowed. You probably have been brushing your teeth this very morning with a veritable nest of loose bristles. Don't take chances. Get a reliable tooth brush.

Rubberset making is a positive and absolutely lasting method of fastening bristles in brushes so that not a single bristle can escape. It is a marvelous invention.

The inside of every Rubberset Tooth Brush is one unvarying principle; gripping bristles in hard, vulcanized rubber. This is true of all Rubberset brushes. You cannot deny yourself a Rubberset Tooth Brush. Now is the time for you to buy. Ask our clerks to show you the many different styles and the methods of construction. The Rubberset Tooth Brush is composed of 30 or 40 perfect little brushes. The bristles in each tuft are held in hard rubber the same as in Rubberset Shaving Brushes. The bristles haven't a chance to come out. Tug, twist or yank and you cannot loosen one of them. Resolve today to clear out the old tooth brushes in the bathroom. Give each member of the family a new Rubberset Tooth Brush.

There is a style for the baby, girls, boys and each adult, with a special identification mark on the handle of each brush. Packed in an individual dustproof hygienic red box.

WEBSTER EAGER FOR BOSTON AMERICAN'S NANTASKET AIR TRIP

Clifford Webster, the young aviator whose task it is to take the new and cranky Webster-Dunne biplanes and drive them for a while to work the kinks out, is looking eagerly forward to his exhibition flight at Nantasket next Sunday.

The AMERICAN has arranged the flight and invites all good people who read this—and want to come—to visit Nantasket Sunday and see just how completely Webster and his 'plane are masters of the air.

Webster himself is a young chap—just as the science of flight is young. He comes from Haverhill, of a wealthy family. His sister was a Wellesley girl who did everything better than any one else—led her classes from start to finish. So Webster comes of a stock that does things as I does them well.

It is two or three years since he sent into the aeroplane game. His people didn't like it at first, but he kept at them for permission and was so obviously in deadly earnest about it that they were at length constrained to give in.

NEW NANTASKET PLAN.

After that he studied with the Wrights for a while, won his license, had a seventy-five-foot fall from which he escaped with scratches, though his plane was smashed, and finally came into touch with Mr. Burgess down at Marblehead, and became a Burgess-Dunne flier.

This is the chap who dazzled the crowds at Revere last Saturday, when he dipped and roller-coasted and volplaned and swooped and circled and climbed over the heads of a quarter of a million people. The AMERICAN arranged that flight, and arranged also for Webster to drop thousands of cards, the possession of which admitted the holders to the AMERICAN'S Home Cities contest, which closes today at noon, and the results of which will be announced next Sunday. There are over a hundred awards in that contest, ranging from $20 to $1. The total of the awards is $250.

Next Sunday at Nantasket there will be some similar features in connection with Webster's flight. What it is has not been fully decided yet.

But if you don't care about airships it is because you have never seen Webster fly. One of our essays has predicted the other day that the perfection of the art of flying will mean the loss forever of the beauty of the sky—that we will not be able to look at a sunset without seeing a monoplane fill across one's golden glory of the sky, or that we will not be able to write poems to the moon for aeroplanes that cut across its placid face. This gentleman even went so far as to predict that a wistful hearting will be on the wane when airships are more common, because nowhere will sweethearts be safe from prying eyes in the clouds.

This may not be so far off as we suppose. Watching Webster and the Burgess-Dunne, one gets an impression of security, and would be easily convinced that the 'plane is as easy to fly and as safe or safer than an automobile.

As a matter of fact, the Burgess-Dunne plane is almost as safe as it looks. It is probably a fair statement that if you put a man with ordinary sense in the 'plane, start the engines and send him aloft, the only way he can hurt himself, barring a broken wing, is to jump overboard.

The 'plane answers that puzzle of the early airmen—the puzzle of stability. Early aeroplanes were so constructed that, by swift and dexterous shifts of the wing and surfaces, cross-puffs of wind and treacherous squalls could be weathered. But even then the flier dared not venture aloft in anything over a mild breeze.

That condition day is past. Webster at Revere last Saturday flew in a gale that approached thirty or forty miles an hour, when the rose well above the water. The wind was so strong that he drove along above the beach at a pretty angle. His 'plane was pointed always ten degrees or so to sea, but it carried him straight ahead, which gave an idea of how fierce a wind he was combatting.

Not only can the Burgess-Dunne 'plane buck high winds, but it automatically balances itself in these winds, and scarcely needs a touch from the aviator. This is accomplished by a curious twisted shape of the wings, the rear edge somewhat depressed in places. These twisted wings are the invention of Lieutenant J. H. Dunne, an Englishman, and they have revolutionized air flights the world over.

OFFERS CASH REWARD.

The security of this balance—the perfect stability of the 'plane—was well illustrated last Saturday at Revere, when Webster flew almost into the teeth of the wind and high above the beach with his arms above his head—the 'plane taking care of itself.

It rides so steadily and easily that Webster's seat far out at the front of the 'plane is not half so dangerous as it looks. From appearances one would not be surprised to see the aeronaut tip forward out of his seat at any time. He is like a man sitting on the hood of a racing automobile, his back against the windshield. That would not be so bad on an auto, for after all, an auto has solid ground beneath, while an aeroplane has only very unstable air. One expects it to dip and plunge and wallow along like a kite. But as a matter of fact it doesn't. Come to Nantasket and see and, incidentally, you may share in the cash awards which the AMERICAN has provided for you, and which will be fully explained in tomorrow's evening AMERICAN.

Mrs. Angle Has Told All to the Police

STAMFORD, Ct., July 9.—Leonard Biondel, father of Mrs. Helen M. Angle, who is held without bail pending the inquest into the death of Waldo R. Ballou, who was found dying on the sidewalk in front of her apartment, declares today that his daughter made a statement to Chief of Police Brennan right after Coroner Phelan recalled her bail hearing last Friday and ordered her rearrested.

"She told Chief Brennan just what she has told us," said Mr. Biondel. "That she heard a noise, went out and found Mr. Ballou on the landing beneath her apartment injured and bleeding. Her first thought was to get him out into the air, she said.

"She was not able to tell the chief how she got him to the street, what the conditions were, or what she did after finding the body. Her mind is a blank as to this and many other details."

Woman Hunts Niece, Heiress to $8,000

The aid of the AMERICAN has been enlisted by Mrs. Annie Starbird of Lynn to find her niece, Ada Frances Gardiner. Mrs. Starbird says that a legacy of $8,000 is waiting for the girl, whom she has not seen for twenty years.

Friday Hour Sales

Originated by W. & A. Bacon Fifteen Years Ago

Read This Letter from Chicago

From "72 cakes of soap in one hour" the Bacon Friday Hour Sales have grown to thousands of dollars in sales in one hour. The original policy of standard quality merchandise at lowest prices remains the same.

Special bargains during the first hour in the morning are marked at or near cost, meaning that if we bought an article at half price we sell it at less than half to make the price at or near cost.

CARMAN GIRL MAY BE FATAL WITNESS

DRAMATIC SCENE AS DAUGHTER TESTIFIES

By VIOLA RODGERS.

FREEPORT, L. I., July 9.—So fraught with incidents so exciting that it seemed as unreal as a moving picture drama, the climax of the inquest held on the death of Mrs. Louise Bailey was reached when District Attorney Smith called to the stand "Elizabeth Carman." A hush went through the crowded court room. Necks were craned when a diminutive figure walked in from the street door without faltering or looking to right or to left, and edged herself in through the tiny space between the District Attorney's table and the witness stand.

This little girl was Elizabeth Carman, only little child of Dr. and Mrs. Carman. She is just under ten, her birthday being in August. Elizabeth showed remarkable composure and, while her small, deep set grayish-green eyes—very much like those of her father—seemed to drink in the scene, she sat with the composure of a grown woman and answered the questions—answers which might be later used as a link in a chain of circumstances instrumental in sending her mother to the death chair.

There was not a man or woman present who did not feel a pang of pity for the little one, who may live to realize the awful part she unconsciously took on that day back in her early childhood.

The little girl, who is tall for her age, wore her flaxen hair in two tight braids tied with small ribbons at the back. She had on a pretty little blue and white striped dress trimmed in blue linen, and she wore a Panama hat, turned up in front and down at the back, with a wide woman striped band in yellow and red colorings about it.

During the child's testimony in Carman, who had been seated near the doorway up to that time, stood up out of his seat and his face grew visibly red and white—spotted, as he were laboring under great excitement and emotion. His eyes were livid, and never for an instant did he take them off the child whom he seemed to be trying to control.

Elizabeth gave a glance toward him now and then, but for the most part looked directly at her questioner and seemed to avoid her father's steady gaze.

Perhaps the most terrible part of all the evidence gathered thus far was given by little Elizabeth in the most matter of fact manner. Even after she had told that she had come in from play and had gone to the piano to practice, this was in the time when Mrs. Carman lay on the stairs, also when Mrs. Bailey went in to see the doctor.

"How long did you play the piano?"

"About ten minutes or fifteen," she replied.

"Did any one say anything to you about stopping playing?" she was asked.

"My mother did."

These three words arrested any of the innocence of a child's mouth telling the truth and the most fatal three words that could Elizabeth Carman may ever utter.

The dictagraph, according to experts, is hardest to hear when music is about.

stairs in her room.

Q—You didn't see her then? A.—Well, I started for upstairs.—

CONTRADICTS MOTHER'S STORY.

Q—But you didn't see your mother in her room after the shot was fired? A.—No. But I know she was there.

Q—But you didn't see her, did you? A.—No.

Q—Did you know your mother said you were in bed when the shot was fired? A.—No.

Q.—If your mother said you were in bed was she mistaken? A.—Yes.

Q—What did you do when the shot was fired? A.—I started to go upstairs.

Q—Whom did you see? A.—I saw my mother. She was in her room and my aunt was going downstairs.

Q—How was your mother dressed? A.—She had on a gown, kimono and slippers.

Q.—And where was your aunt? A.—She was just going downstairs.

Q—Did you see any ladies pass through the hall? A.—Just one. I saw my aunt open the door and let her out.

Q—Now, what did you sit down in the chair for, the big chair? A.—I was just looking out the window.

Q—And were you all alone there A.—Yes.

Q—And it was dark there? A.—Yes.

Q—There was no light? A.—No.

Q—And no one to talk to? A.—No.

Q—Why didn't you go upstairs? A.—I just didn't want to.

Q—Did you see Celia, the colored girl, when you were in the chair? A.—No; she was washing the dishes.

Q—And you didn't see any man in the reception room while you were sitting there? A.—Just that boy and the woman.

Q—Did you see the boy go into your father's office? A.—No.

Q—How long before the shooting was it that he went into the reception room? A.—About twenty minutes, I would say.

Q—And you didn't see a man there? A.—No, but he might have been there and I didn't see him.

Q—Have you talked with your mother about this? A.—No; I haven't seen her.

TESTIMONY OF ELIZABETH CARMAN AT MURDER INQUEST

NEW YORK, July 9.—Elizabeth Carman, nine-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Carman, was the most affecting witness at the concluding session of the inquest which led to her mother's arrest for murder.

She sat calmly on a high chair, her stubby legs swinging to and fro, and answered clearly and positively the questions put to her. She was sworn after Coroner Norton's objections were overcome.

She never hesitated for an answer save once. Her answers were given positively, and even when she said her mother was in her room upstairs at the time of the shooting, and was perfectly sure of it, she could not explain how she knew.

She told of sitting alone in the darkened dining room in a rocking chair by the window, and the spectators felt a tremor of sympathy for the picture of the little tot, forbidden to play the piano by her mother, alone in the darkened room, peopling the dark with the creatures of her baby imagination, dreaming the big, big dreams of childhood.

Here is her testimony, verbatim:

Q—Did you see any patients come into your father's office? A.—Yes.

Q—Ladies or gentlemen? A.—A lady and a boy.

Q—Do you know who the boy was? A.—No.

Q—How old would you let he was? A.—About fifteen.

Q—Had you ever seen the boy before? A.—Yes, in school.

SAYS MOTHER WENT UPSTAIRS.

Q—Did he go into the house before you did, or after? A.—Just about the same time. He went into the waiting room.

Q.—Did you see any one on the veranda that night? A.—Well, my grandmother and my aunt went out just after supper.

Q.—Where did your mother go? A.—She went upstairs.

Q—And you went outdoors? A.—Yes.

Q—And when you came into the house what did you do? A.—I sat down to practice on the piano. It was just about dark.

Q—Was there a light in the room where you were practicing? A.—Yes, sir.

Q—And was there any one in the reception room then that you noticed? A.—Yes, the lady and the boy.

Q—Did you see any one else come in that evening? A.—No.

Q—How long did you stay at the piano? A.—About ten or fifteen minutes.

Q—And was your back turned to the hall.

Q—So that any one passing through the hall you would not be likely to see? A.—No, but I could hear.

MOTHER STOPPED PIANO PLAYING.

Q.—Did any one say anything to you about stopping playing? A.—My mother did.

Q—She called to you? A.—Yes.

Q—And when she called to you what did you do? A.—I stopped playing. The dictagraph, it is explained by experts, is most sensitive to piano vibrations. They destroy the transmitting power of the instrument.

Q—Where did you go then? A.—Into the dining room and sat down in the big rocking chair.

Q—How long did you stay there? A.—About ten minutes, I believe.

Q—And then where did you go? A.—I stayed there until I heard the shot.

Q—Where were you in bed when the shot was fired? A.—No.

Q—Are you sure? A.—No, I just sat in the rocking chair.

Q—With whom have you been talking about this case? A.—No one.

Q—Didn't you talk to Mr. Levy? A.—Just Mr. Levy. That's all.

Q.—And when did you talk to Mr. Levy? A.—Sunday.

Q.—Did he tell you to say you were in the big chair if you were called as a witness? A.—I cannot remember.

Q.—Now can't you remember? A.—Yes after a moment's hesitation.

Q—And didn't your father tell you also to say that? A.—I can't remember that.

[illegible] where we [illegible] mother shot was [illegible]-Up.

Coroner Norton's Order for Arrest of Mrs. Carman

Justice Coroden Norton, acting as coroner and on viewing the body of Louise Bailey, found dead at No. 118 West Merrick road, Freeport, Nassau County, N. Y., to inquire on behalf of the people how and in what manner the said Louise Bailey came to her death, does upon his oath and affirmation say that the said Louise Bailey came to her death by criminal means by reason of a bullet fired into the body of the said Louise Bailey from a revolver loaded with powder and lead and held and fired from the hand of one Florence Carman, and there being reasonable cause to believe that the said Florence Carman is chargeable with such shooting and killing of the said Louise Bailey, I do hereby order that a warrant issue for the rest of the said Florence Carman and that she be held to appear before me for examination on said charge.—The finding of Coroner Norton, ordering Mrs. Carman held.

LANDLADY URGED BARDES TO TELL HIS STORY TO PRIEST

NEW YORK, July 9.—This is the story of how Ellwood T. Bardes, the insurance agent, came to give the testimony which resulted in Mrs. Florence Carman's arrest for the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey.

Bardes roomed at the home of Mrs. Nellie Gurkin, wife of a local grocery clerk.

"Mr. Bardes came to Freeport eight weeks ago and took a room in my house immediately," she said.

"Two weeks ago he became lame from walking too much while at work. His ankle swelled up, and on Tuesday evening, the night of the shooting, he decided to go to Dr. Carman. He didn't say anything to me the next day about having witnessed the shooting.

"My mother is buried in Greenfield Cemetery, Hempstead. I asked him to go there with me to decorate her grave. He was delighted. We went to the cemetery early and view Mrs. Bailey's grave.

"I feel sorry for poor Mrs. Carman, I said, taking Mr. Bardes by the arm, 'but I feel far more sorry for the family of the poor murdered woman.'

"Mr. Bardes flinched, and, I thought, turned a little pale. Monday he came home early and went to his room. Soon he came down and called me to the front room. 'Nell,' he said, 'there's something on my conscience that I can't bear any longer without talking.' Then he told me the story of having accidentally witnessed the shooting of Mrs. Bailey.

"I advised him to go to the priest here and make a confession."

SCENE AT CARMAN HOME LIKE OUTSIDE OF A CIRCUS TENT

FREEPORT, L. I., July 9.—The scene about the home of Dr. Edwin Carman just before Mrs. Carman was arrested for murder was like the scene outside a circus tent.

In that mysterious whispered way in which travels all news—especially bad news—it became known that "something was going to happen" at the Carman house. Little companies of women in threes and fours began to troop along Grove street and turn into Merrick road.

A big body of men gathered on the porch of the Elks' Club, diagonally across the street. Other men and boys hustled along the Merrick road and Grove street. Automobiles with gayly clad women and their escorts in flannels began to arrive and park along the block in which is the home of the suspected woman.

There were no fewer than 100 motor cars banked along the curbings on both sides of the street, and the crowd that stood across the way from the house numbered at least 200, and I didn't see him. I didn't see him. and I didn't see him. Fashionable, as well as obscure Freeport was in the assemblage.

A Word of Precaution.

JUST wherein lies the reason for the use of vegetable preparations for infants and children?

Why are any but vegetable preparations unsafe for infants and children?

Why are Syrups, Cordials and Drops condemned by all Physicians and most laymen?

Why has the Government placed a ban on all preparations containing, among other poisonous drugs, Opium in its variously prepared forms and pleasing tastes, and under its innumerable names?

These are questions that every Mother will do well to inquire about.

Any Physician will recommend the keeping of Fletcher's Castoria in the house for the common ailments of infants and children.

CASTORIA

Letters from Prominent Druggists addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

S. J. Briggs & Co., of Providence, R. I., say: "We have sold Fletcher's Castoria in our three stores for the past twenty years and consider it one of the best preparations on the market."

Mansur Drug Co., of St. Paul, Minn., says: "We are not in the habit of recommending proprietary medicines, but we never hesitate to say a good word for Castoria. It is a medical success."

Hegeman & Co., of New York City, N. Y., say: "We can say for your Castoria that it is one of the best selling preparations in our stores. That is conclusive evidence that it is satisfactory to the users."

W. H. Chapman, of Montreal, Que., says: "I have sold Fletcher's Castoria for many years and have yet to hear of one word other than praise of its virtues. I look upon your preparation as one of the few so called patent medicines having merit and unhesitatingly recommend it as a safe household remedy."

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS BEARS the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

STORY OF BARDES CAUSED ARREST

PRIEST URGED HIM TO GIVE CARMAN FACTS

NEW YORK, July 9—It was the sensational testimony of Ellwood T. Bardes which resulted directly in Mrs. Florence Carman's arrest on a charge of murder.

Bardes testified unwillingly, and only after being urged to do so by his priest. He was a reluctant witness, but answered all questions carefully and convincingly. Here is a verbatim report of his testimony.

Q—Where did you have dinner Tuesday night? A—In a restaurant on South Main street, Freeport, around 6 o'clock.

Q—Where did you go after having your dinner? A—I went home and later went up South Main street and turned up Merrick road.

Q—Where were you going? A—To Dr. Carman's.

Q—To see him professionally? A—Yes, sir.

Q—You changed your mind about seeing the doctor? A—Yes.

Q—Did you hear a report? A—I did. I thought it was the explosion of an automobile tire.

Q—Did you look toward Dr. Carman's residence? A—I looked both ways.

Q—When you looked toward Dr. Carman's residence what did you see? A—A woman walking on the lawn, to the west of Dr. Carman's residence and about opposite the office.

Q—About how far west of the office was she when you saw her first—five or ten feet? A—It might be ten or fifteen feet.

Q—How was that woman dressed? A—She had on a dark skirt and a light waist.

(Hazel Coombes testified on Monday that when she was in the doctor's office Mrs. Carman wore a dark skirt and white waist.)

Q—Did she have anything on her head? A—Not a thing.

Q—Which way was she going when you saw her? A—Towards the rear. She was strolling along.

Q—About how tall would you say that woman was? A—About five feet seven inches. I got a good look at her.

IN DOUBT ON TIRE.

Q—How much would you say that woman would weigh? A—Anywhere from 160 to 170 pounds.

(Mrs. Carman weighs about 160 pounds.)

Q—How soon after you heard the report did you see the woman? A—As soon as I looked around.

Q—Have you ever seen the doctor's wife? A—I have seen a woman I took to be the doctor's wife.

Q—About what time was it when you saw this woman last Tuesday night? A—That is a hard proposition. I cannot take an oath to the time.

Q—Well, to the best of your judgment? A—Anywhere for 7.45 to 8.15.

Q—Have you any opinion now as to who the woman was you saw? A—No, I could not really say I have an opinion.

Q—Could you tell what the color of the hair of the woman was whom you saw? A—Yes, I judged it was light.

(Mrs. Carman's hair is light brown.)

Q—Did you notice how her hair was dressed. A—I did not notice that.

Q—You are positive this person had a dark skirt, a light waist and that she was bare-headed? A—I am.

BARDES' FIRST STORY.

Earlier in conference with Sheriff Pettit and District Attorney Smith, Bardes said:

"I know Mrs. Carman very well. I've had to make a number of visits at the Carman home ever since I've been in Freeport to collect insurance from one of the maids there. In making my collections I've had occasion to see Mrs. Carman several times. Last week after I'd been bothered with some trouble with my right foot for some time, I decided to consult Dr. Carman about it.

"But after I got there I decided I wouldn't go in to see the doctor, after all, as money hasn't been very plentiful with me lately. I made up my mind to go down to the drug store and get some liniment for my foot. So I turned around and started to walk away.

"Just as I passed the house and was in front of the yard I heard a sharp report. I saw a woman run from the window in the rear of the house and go inside. While I will not swear that it was Mrs. Carman, I think it was she."

DOCTOR'S WIFE PREY OF DEMON OF JEALOUSY

"The being who suffers most on this earth is not the outcast, the disgraced, the absurd, the misunderstood, the diseased—but the doctor's wife!"

So says Mrs. G. Vere Tyler, widow of Dr. Lachlan Tyler and daughter-in-law of former President Tyler, in a remarkable article on the Carman-Bailey murder case, written for the AMERICAN.

"Nine-tenths of the doctors' wives," declares Mrs. Tyler, "are half mad through pain the better part of their lives. The sin they commit in practising unconscious torture on their wives is provocative of crime.

"No one can understand the woman's jealousy of her husband's patients unless one has been a doctor's wife. Mrs. Carman, innocent or guilty, has the secret sympathy of thousands of doctors' wives."

By MRS. G. VERE TYLER.

I believe there are thousands of doctors' wives striding by Mrs. Carman's side, holding her hand in understanding and sympathy.

The being who suffers most on this earth is not the outcast, the disgraced, the abused, the misunderstood, the diseased, but the doctor's wife. I have been. I know. A thousand times I wanted to see my husband dead that the stillness of death would give me rest. Yet of all the men in the professions of life, my personal experience and observation have taught me that the doctor is the strongest.

No man is subjected to like temptations of the flesh and no man so resists them, and my admiration of doctors is one of the stirring exalted feelings of my existence. They are nothing's heroes. But it is my firm conviction that a doctor should not marry. It is useless to deny the suffering of doctors' wives. She can't escape suffering—she has wedded herself to it.

NO PAIN LIKE THIS.

There is no suffering like this. Nine-tenths of the doctors' wives are developed through pain, the better part of their lives. Therefore, I respect that doctors should not marry. It is the rule, a doctor's wife's suffering is uncalled for. He is so above the average person that it may be said he is the only man who may not be human. He trains himself to be superhuman and often succeeds. The wife then cannot, however, is in practising unconscious torture on their wives. It is provocative of crime. Therefore, doctors should not marry. I would rather see my daughter wedded to a consumptive than a doctor. She would at least in the case of the former have moments of real—peace. My own experience has been that a doctor's wife never has. Let him promise a certain evening—let her live in the thought—this night I shall have him—he will be mine—it is true—he intends to be—the light in her eyes responds to him—he is glad for her! One call of the bell and not only is her joy in a heap in her heart, but a heavy curse is in its turn, with red-hot iron into her flesh.

Vivisection is mild to the sufferings a doctor's wife undergoes. Her eyes (?) are not dissected, but flayed. She does it herself and cannot resist doing it. For that is the worst part of jealousy—in nine cases out of ten it is self-inflicted. And the victim goes on inflicting, maddening pain upon herself and is powerless to stop doing so.

NONE CAN UNDERSTAND.

No one can understand the woman's jealousy of her husband's patients unless one has been a doctor's wife. The pains of childbirth are mild to its torture. In one there is promise of reward—the highest joy in an anticipation—in the other more pain, more madness and knowledge in one of the worst cruelty ever set forth. And she is powerless against jealousy, as she is against laughing if tickled in the ribs.

It is impossible to do divine jealousy. Whoever can claim control of jealousy has never felt it. Of all the emotions it is the strongest, and it is the most unitary and immune to reason. It is of the bone of murder, more than the desire for gold. It is so much more cruel than the grave that the grave often invites the victim to it. And most women, when jealous, are murderers in spirit. The average jealous woman not only wants to murder the object of her jealousy, but all women of the opposite sex contained in their mere existence.

I honor my guilty, it is my belief that Mrs. Carman has the secret sympathy of thousands of doctors' wives.

Evidence Which Resulted in Mrs. Carman's Arrest

"She was about five feet seven inches tall, and wore a dark skirt and light waist. She wore no hat. Her hair was light, though I cannot say how it was dressed. She weighed, I should say, about 150 pounds, maybe 160 or 170. She was not walking rapidly—just strolling—and I saw her distinctly—got a look at her, but I never saw her face. Her back was toward me all the time."

This was the testimony of Ellwood T. Bardes, which resulted in Mrs. Florence Carman's arrest.

Mrs. Carman has light brown hair, streaked with gray, is about five feet seven inches tall and weighs about 160 pounds.

Hazel Coombs swears that Mrs. Carman was wearing a white shirtwaist and dark skirt.

NAWNS BEGIN TO CLEAR UP. BOYLSTON ST.

Following the AMERICAN'S reports of the heavy business losses to Boylston street merchants because of the protracted occupancy of Copley Square by the Nawn Construction Company, the giant of the Nawns today rapidly is being dismantled.

The Nawn company had occupied the $1,500,000 city owned triangle in Copley Square, rent free, for eighteen months previous to the AMERICAN'S expose. Nine wooden shacks and three huge concrete mixers littered the place, the whole being surrounded with a high board fence. To all intents and purposes the land might as well have been owned by the Nawns personally.

All but two of these shanties had been removed today. The largest of the concrete mixers also had been dismantled and removed. It is expected that the remainder of the machinery and litter will all be gone before the end of the week.

The shanties will go to the Rochester street, Dorchester, plant of the company, while the machinery and other material stored there will go to the Columbia road, Dorchester, yard. Work of repaving the street about the triangle was started yesterday and this is expected to be finished in a day or two.

Suit for thirty thousand dollars' damages has been entered by A. Sinman & Co. against the High N. S. Contracting Company for injury to their stock in trade while the Nawns were building a section of the subway through the adjoining street outside the Sherman building. This damage is said to have resulted from gas, dirt and dust being permitted to enter the Sherman building while the subway work was on.

Kahn's New Home to Cost a Million

NEW YORK, July 8.—Plans for the residence which Otto H. Kahn will erect at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Ninety-first street have been filed with the Bureau of Buildings by C. H. Gilbert, architect. Estimates indicate that the house will cost more than $1,000,000.

Two Malden 'Indians' Rounded Up; One Was 9 and His Pal 7

INJUN BILL.
The Raffles of the Plains.

CHAPTER I.

Injun Bill, the Raffles of the Plains, was alert. "Hist," he hissed; and Cigarette Phil, his trusty Bunny, listened.

It was a dark and stormy night. Injun Bill's warning sign was followed by a desperate deed. He pointed. Cigarette Phil followed the threatening finger. Their chance had come!

With swift, crouching steps they raced ahead, ducked into a narrow aperture, and looked about. "He's wanted to lunch," said Phil.

"Fool," hissed Bill. "He sleeps. He must shun not the amorings."

Phil subsided, apologized. Bill moved swiftly here and thither. Suddenly he gave a low cry, snatched open a drawer, and waxed aloft his boots. Wealth untold! Twenty-five dollars! Wordlessly, they turned and made good their escape.

CHAPTER II.

The desperate desperadoes followed this daring foray with another, and another. In the camp of a harmless bettered on the banks of the wild Wahoo River they overpowered a box of cigars.

Later, vice versa.

This was a terrific day. Recovering from their battle with the wild Indians who emerged from that cigar box, they ventured into a cave. Straining qualities here all about, seeming to bubble and boil with hideous significance. "It's a laundry," whispered Phil.

"It's a dragon's cave," snarled Bill. "Have a care."

There was no loot here. Their supplies were running short. In yet another venture they were unsuccessful. Life was black.

CHAPTER III.

And then the fates were kind. Bill spied, huddled asleep in their log house, a horde of Indian braves. Stealthily the two crept forward. The capture was complete. One after another, they struck a match and put the captives in the cage.

"Bill," wept Phil, after a long silence, "I don't like to smoke these Indians."

"Crybaby," snarled Bill. And thereafter Phil suffered in silence.

The next foray was uneventful. The intended victims barricaded themselves behind a steel door. Battering rams failed to force it. "The little devils tried to blow de safe," commented the officer who inspected the damage later.

CHAPTER IV.

Then came easy prey—a peaceful land where none opposed them.

"Oodles of loot here," hissed Bill. And he jammed a big revolver into a little pocket. Phil seized a gold watch. They were about to flee. Then:

"Here, ye little scamps." A heavy hand fell upon their shoulders. They were lost.

CHAPTER V.

"Sarge," said the officer. "Here's Walter Brennan and Stanley Botch of Barrett avenue, Malden. What'll I do with 'em?"

"Lock 'em up," snapped the sergeant. "Did you search them?"

"Yeah—the big kid had a revolver and some cigars. The little one had a watch. Brennan is nine and Stanley here is seven. They'd been playin' Injuns. Say, they broke into eight places in two weeks."

And the doors clanged shut behind Injun Bill and Cigarette Phil. Their enemies had triumphed.

Boston Dressmaker Wins Paris Victory

PARIS, July 9.—Mrs. Mary F. Dolan, known in the business world as Madame Driscoll, a Boston dressmaker, who was arrested in New York on her arrival from Europe charged with attempting to smuggle goods valued at $10,000 into the United States, and Henry W. Munroe, a New York banker, today won a victory in the French courts when P. G. Regnault, appointed investigator, made his report which reads in part as follows:

"The Civil Tribunal of the Seine has no power to authorize the Munroe bank to give information confidential in its nature."

The Tribunal is expected to render its decision within a week.

Munroe was sentenced at Boston to two months in jail and a fine of $250 for contempt in failing to produce certain checks said to have been drawn on his Paris branch to pay for dresses and jewelry seized on arrival in Boston by customs officials.

Men Led by Ettor Threaten Mines

BELLAIRE, O., July 9.—"Abandon your mines or we'll wreck them," is the send your families away or we'll do it for you," is the ultimatum of scores of Italian miners who, under the supposed influence of Joseph J. Ettor, I. W. W. agitator, are waging a campaign of havoc among the collieries of this district.

Mine operators, terrified by mob threats, have in several instances abandoned their properties, hoping thereby to save the lives of their engineers and others employed in care-taking capacity.

GIRL THOUGHT HELD CAPTIVE BY U. S. SAILOR

A strange story of a girl held captive by sailors is revealed in the complaint of Mrs. Theodore Smith of No. 17 Columbus street, Fall River, to the officers of the battleship Nebraska, now at the Charlestown Navy Yard, that her daughter Janie is missing.

A reward of $25 has been offered for information leading to finding the girl.

A sailor, James McCarthy, is now being held on board the Nebraska until an investigation can clear up the girl's disappearance. The mother tells a strange story. She says:

"I was on board the Nebraska yesterday, and while there my daughter called on the phone and asked if she might be allowed to talk with Mc-Carthy. This was refused. They wouldn't let me talk to her. On the other hand, some of his accomplices aboard told her that I was here looking for her, and it's very evident that she will give me a wide berth now.

"I am not here to punish Janie. I shall die if I don't see her soon. Her father is ill as a result of her running away. All will be forgiven if she will only return and make me happy once more. I've walked the streets night and day hoping to get a sight of her, but have met with nothing but disappointment.

"I fear she is being held a captive by some of McCarthy's friends. She does not mean to stay away from me I know. She never was bad. She was influenced by a sailor, his uniform, just like so many young girls are."

JANIE SMITH, Fall River girl, thought held captive by a sailor on the battleship Nebraska.

Manitoba Murderer Hanged.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 9.—John Krafchenko was hanged here today for the murder of H. M. Arnold, manager of the Bank of Montreal, at Plum Soulee, Man., on December 3.

Anna Shaw Excuses Sex at Prize Fight

NEW YORK, July 9.—Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, thinks that the women who crowded to the Welsh-Ritchie prize fight in London Tuesday night, were simply thoughtless persons craving excitement and that their attendance at such a spectacle is no indication that the sex is casting aside its ideals it has held so long. She said the women had meekly followed the lead of the men, who had wearied of the more conventional forms of entertainment.

Wied Princess Pleads for Aid for Albania

DURAZZO, July 9.—Princess Sophie, wife of Prince William of Wied, the ruler of Albania, made an urgent appeal today to her relative, King Charles of Roumania, to send a relief expedition into Albania against the rebels. The abdication of Prince William is delayed pending the answer of the Roumanian King. The Greek military authorities were notified today that the Epirotes (Greek irregulars) are in complete possession of Koritza, an important city in Southern Albania, and are preparing to proclaim it a part of Greece.

Liner Statenham Launched at Belfast

BELFAST, Ireland, July 9.—The Holland-Amerika line's new steamship Statenham was successfully launched here today. Her displacement is 12,000 tons, and she has accommodations for 4,500 persons on board, including crew and passengers.

HUERTA READY TO RETIRE FOR SAKE OF PEACE

MEXICO CITY, July 9.—President Huerta's offer to the Constitutionalists to negotiate for the establishment of a new provisional government which has been officially announced by Eduardo Ruiz, acting Minister of Foreign Relations in both Houses of Congress last night, was regarded here today as the first official step towards the retirement of Huerta.

The manner in which the statement of Ruiz was received by both deputies and senators shows that the national leaders see in it an important advance in the efforts to restore peace and establish a stable government that will receive the recognition of the United States and other world powers.

World Society Mad, Vardaman Asserts

WASHINGTON, July 9.—"The world has gone mad on this subject of society," said Senator Vardaman, speaking against the appropriation of $500,000 for a government building at the San Francisco Exposition.

"I wish we could get back to the simplicity of the administration of Thomas Jefferson. In this item there is provision for $50,000 for the 'entertainment' of foreigners and others at the exposition. I am especially opposed to that."

Bomb Victims' Ashes To Be on Exhibition

NEW YORK, July 9.—Alexander Berkman, the anarchist chief, today ordered that the urn containing the ashes of the victims of last Saturday's bomb explosion, brought to New York from the Fresh Pond crematory to be placed on public exhibition. He directed that they should be taken to the office of Mother Earth, the anarchist publication.

To prevent any demonstration upon their arrival the police ordered guards stationed about the Mother Earth office.

New Haven Men Praise Mellen

WASHINGTON, July 9.—William S. Skinner and Charles F. Brooker, directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission a memorandum amplifying the testimony they gave before the commission's investigation into the financial affairs of the New Haven system. Replying with a tribute to Charles S. Mellen, the two directors go over the entire history of the New Haven's expansion.

13 More on New Haven Pension List

Supplementing its action on last March, when thirty-eight employes were retired on pensions, directors of the New Haven have placed thirteen additional names on the company's pension roll, making fifty-one employes retired in three months on pensions aggregating $1,547 a month.

HUNT FOR BODY AS WIFE AND NEIGHBOR FLEE

Through the fields and woods along the Beverly-Wenham line police today searched for the body of Gaetano Barlato of No. 2 Cabot street, Beverly, believed to have been murdered by his wife and a neighbor.

The wife and neighbor have disappeared. They have three days' start on any pursuers, and are expected to try to go back to Italy by way of St. John, N. B.

The supposed tragedy came to light yesterday in Beverly. Mrs. Gaetano Devalo, wife of the man who disappeared, said:

"My husband, Gaetano Devalo, liked Mrs. Barlato. Mrs. Barlato quarreled with her husband. Last Friday night he didn't like the supper because she wouldn't eat with him. So Barlato wouldn't eat the supper, and Mrs. Barlato threw it out the window. Then she asked him to go with her after blueberries Saturday morning, and said my husband would go with them. They started early.

"Mrs. Barlato and my husband came back Saturday at noon. I asked where Barlato was. They said he had a job and would be home every month.

"Then on Sunday they seemed scared, and I saw Mrs. Barlato wiping a knife. And I asked my husband what was the matter. And he told me they had stabbed Barlato and hid his body in the grass."

Roxbury Youth Is Held for Store Break

John G. O'Brien, nineteen years of age, of Roxbury, was before Judge Palmer in the Roxbury Court today charged with breaking and entering the store owned by the Elmore Wine Company on Tremont street, July 5. The case was continued until July 14, and the prisoner was held in $500.

—If in any way inclined to doubt that your freckles can be easily removed, just take the trouble to step into Shepard Norwell Company and see for yourself.

—We found this red-haired boy in Hyde Park, removed the freckles from one side of his face, and by special arrangement he is on exhibition here for a few days.

—Have you been induced to buy worthless preparations for removing freckles, tan and moth patches? Do not despair. See this boy, talk with the salesman, and be convinced. SHEPARD NORWELL COMPANY, Tremont Street, Winter Street and Temple Place.

ALL DAY SATURDAY CLOSING

—Inaugurated last year by a very few of us, who believed such would prove a blessing to the employees—

—Has secured some added converts in Boston.

—READ WHAT HAS BEEN SAID by some New York and Philadelphia houses who fell into line this year:

"It is with a greater, broader and better Twentieth Century view of store-keeping that we enter into this progressive movement—a movement we feel sure will soon be universal among the high-intentioned among up-to-the-times houses in America."

"It seems to be almost unanimously conceded that purchasers will place their seal of approval upon the new movement by becoming sharers in it to the extent of doing shopping during July and August between Monday mornings and Friday afternoons before five o'clock."

"Hundreds of letters and telegrams have commended the all-Saturday holidays, and thousands, by handshakes and kindly visits, have approved the reduction of hours of labor."

"To say that the workpeople are pleased is not strange."

"BUT HOW ABOUT THE PUBLIC?

"Will they be inconvenienced?

"Will they be willing to be inconvenienced for the sake of becoming participants in securing rest, recreation, study time and health-affording sports, travel and amusements?

"Will they forego Saturday purchases and do the week's shopping on the first five weekdays?

"Well, we will see!

"We shall try it if no one else does!

"Money is not the only profit of the kind of business we are working at."

—THIS IS AS WE FELT—AND ACTED A YEAR AGO. Among the New York houses closing this year are—

—B. Altman & Co. —John Wanamaker.
—Lord & Taylor. —Best & Co.

—It is to be hoped that by next year, after watching the result of New York's progress in action, Boston business may be largely if not wholly suspended on Saturdays during these two hot weather months.

Our hours during July and August 8:30 to 5:00 o'clock every day — but SATURDAYS CLOSED ALL DAY.

1,000 SHOE AND LEATHER MEN ON HARBOR TRIP

Shoe and leather dealers from all over the world who are attending the International Shoe and Leather Market Fair in Mechanics Building, started early today on a trip down Boston Harbor on a specially chartered steamer. It was called "Sail from Boston" day.

More than 1,000 men gathered at Rowe's wharf for the trip. The steamer made its way down the harbor and rounded Boston Light. After viewing all the harbor forts, the shoe and leather men landed at Nantasket for a dinner.

After dinner sports were arranged for on the grounds which adjoin Paragon Park. Plans for a general frolic have been arranged for the visitors at the beach.

Many of the local shoe and leather concerns are holding reunions of their sales forces. A score of trade associations are today holding annual meetings and business sessions.

Hundreds of persons gathered at Mechanics Building today to view the 500 exhibits. Shoe and leather men declare that the fair is the best one ever held in this country and that every line of the leather business is represented.

TO SAVE EYES
Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It If You Have Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that every one should use:

2 grains Optona (1 tablet).
2 ounces Water.

Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Optona system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription promptly. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.

Gossip and Fun Gathered at Big Boston Shoe Fair

"Windy Jim" is on deck at the big Shoe Fair. Boston does not need any east wind as long as "Jim" is around. It is said he will cool off any number of men with his wind. Everybody likes "Windy Jim" and "Jim" likes everyone.

Wherever there is a calm, get Jim to come around and he will make ripples over the surface. He's just in his element at the fair.

Jake Bear and Old Man Oscar Here

"Jake" Bear of Oklahoma is there with the eyedrops for the ladies. He's strong on his collar and lavender tie. Jake is making one of the strongest drawing cards at the fair.

Old man Oscar is around with his bald head. Any fair without Oscar is incomplete.

"Waggie" Teaches Trade to Sons

H. J. Wagner is representative for New England and New York for C. H. Aborn & Company, who have been sixty years in the shoe manufacturing business. He's rushing around at the fair with "Shoey" Fitzpatrick. "Waggie," ever since he opened his eyes, has seen shoes. His grandfather, his father and all his stock have talked shoes for generations. "Waggie" has three children and he's teaching them the business now.

"Waggie" says: "Women's feet are growing larger."

W. R. Mason Has Smokes to Burn

Here's William Randolph Mason coming along. You'll know him by the brand of cigars he passes around and by the way he protrudes his chest. Billy knows a thing or two about what kind of smokers the boys like, but the boys have always a cigar in their pockets when Billy comes around with his brand.

Henry Hall Brings Some Optimism

Henry Hall, vice-president of the North Western Leather Company, is one of the busiest men at the fair. When asked how business was, he turned around and said: "Business is immense. You show me the man who says business is poor and I'll give him a ducking."

Blames Fallen Arch on Tango

Dr. M. H. Kasindorf of New York, who has one of the booths explaining the care of the feet, pronounces the tango responsible for the fallen arch.

"It's this tango business that is putting many women's feet out of commission. When I was a boy I used to dance on the heel of my foot, but now they dance on the ball of the foot. Pretty soon we as a race will not be able to walk more than a mile a day."

Harney Seeking Revenge on Fish

There's Peter J. Harney of Lynn. Have you heard that story of his fishing at South Weymouth?

He was just up to his knees in water and caught a pickerel. He yelled over to H. J. Wagner of C. H. Aborn & Company, who was trying to land another fish:

"Come over here, Waggie, and kill this fish," yelled Harney. "Bring a brick or a stone with you."

But before Waggie got over to the pickerel, the fish wiggled its way back into the water. Harney is going back with some of his Western friends to get even with that pickerel.

$1,000 Curiosity Feature of Fair

Frank Delano and "Al" Kerr, who are in charge of the Revere Rubber Company exhibit, have a large mat made entirely of rubber heels. Every young lady who walks upon it can get a prize, if she will tell the number of heels in it. It cost over $1,000. It's one of the curiosities of the fair.

Dr. Ray Will Teach Walking

Dr. A. L. Ray of Chicago has an exhibit of the proper way to walk in the street. He can teach you to walk straight and erect and no longer become a sidewheeler.

Chandler Likes South America

A. R. Chandler of South America knows all about the hides from that section and boasts that he had to pay "ten bucks" for shoes down there which he can get in Boston for five. "It's a great country down there," he says. "Young men of Boston ought to go down and spend a few years. When you make a South American your friend he will stick to you."

BURNS SUES J. B. SANDO FOR TRAILING WIFE

Joseph B. Sando of Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay, is being sued for $500 by Robert Burns, head of a Boston detective agency, who alleges Sando failed to pay for the services of detectives he employed to watch and trail his wife as part of the divorce proceedings brought by Sando in 1913. Burns has filed another suit for $2,000 against Mrs. Edwin Dodge of Highland avenue, Newton.

Burns states that Sando paid a part of the bill, which amounts to $2544.45, but refused to pay more.

The detectives are alleged to have followed Mrs. Sando and to have put in many hours on street corners. Counter proceedings were filed by Mrs. Sando against her husband.

Several other suits, relating to those of the Sandos, have grown out of the original one. Mrs. Sando was given a decree nisi last March, and the custody of her children. She was also granted $20 a week alimony.

The Dodge suit, which is filed in Middlesex County, will come up within a short time.

HAPPENINGS IN SOCIETY

BOSTONIANS ARE GUESTS IN NEWPORT

KATHERINE PAUL, WELLESLEY GRADUATE, IS TO WED H. K. URION

Among the prettiest of prospective brides is Miss Katherine Paul, daughter of Mrs. Isaac P. Paul of Boston, who will shortly marry Henry Kimball Urion, Dartmouth '12 and Harvard Law School '15. Miss Paul is a graduate of Wellesley in the class of '14 and is decidedly popular. Mr. Urion is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred R. Urion of Chicago.

Miss Paul is at present with her mother at Fitzwilliam, N. H., where the wedding will likely take place in the early Autumn.

Mrs. Thomas Wentworth Higginson has sailed for a Summer in Europe.

Mrs. Hollis Hunnewell of Wellesley has been the guest in Newport this week of her mother, Mrs. Frederick Nelson.

Mrs. C. H. Sherburne of Boston is the guest of Mrs. John C. Fairchild at Pine Lodge, Newport.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Draper and their pretty debutante daughter, Helen, who was quite the belle of her season last Winter, are at Guy's Cliff Bar Harbor.

* * *

Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, who has been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate at their Stockbridge estate, has returned to her Boston home, as have Mr. and Mrs. Grant Walker, who have been guests in Lenox of Miss Anna Blake Shaw.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William Bulitt (nee Iasigi) have returned to Stockbridge from a brief visit in New York. The Bulitts are guests of Mrs. Bulitt's mother, Mrs. Oscar Iasigi, at her estate, "Clovereroft."

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Livingston Hoyt, who are at Beverly, are planning to go to Stautsburg, N. Y., for the Autumn.

* * *

Mrs. Albert Lamb Lincoln and Mrs. Edwin Clapp of Boston have just arrived at the Red Lion Inn, Stockbridge.

Miss Elizabeth C. Brown of Boston is among the recent arrivals at the Oceanside, in Magnolia, where she is to spend the Summer.

* * *

Mrs. Reginald Gray and her son, Reginald Gray, Jr., are among the latest arrivals at Magnolia. They have taken apartments in East Flume Cottage.

Katherine Paul, Wellesley graduate, who is soon to marry Henry Kimball Urion, Harvard Law School '15.

Hillstrom Prefers Shooting to Noose

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 9.—Joseph Hillstrom, better known as Joe Hill, poet, composer and prominent in the I. W. W. organization, now awaiting execution here for the murder of John G. Morrison and his son, J. Arling Morrison, elected to be shot when given his choice between shooting and hanging. The execution will take place September.

RITCHIE SAYS PICTURES SHOW HE HAD BETTER OF BOUT WITH WELS

RITCHIE SAYS MOVIES SHOW HE WON BOUT

By WILLIE RITCHIE,
Former World's Lightweight Champion.

(Special Cable to the American.)

LONDON, July 9.—I did not talk after the fight because I was too much hurt—not physically—but my heart. Even after reading the newspaper accounts of the fight I still refuses to make any comments. But yesterday afternoon I saw a special showing of the movies—and I'm ready to say something.

I'm going to try and arrange with the Federal authorities at home to allow me to bring a reel of pictures to New York, so I can show them privately for New York newspaper men.

If one single individual who saw the full twenty three-minute rounds says I should not have had a draw at the worst, I'll donate $1,000 to any charity the AMERICAN designates.

WHAT PICTURES SHOW.

Welsh never landed one effective blow on me from start to finish. I'm just as fit tonight as I was before the fight that night and ready to go in and do it all over again right now. Pictures cannot lie, they say, and pictures show Welsh running away, covering up, ducking one time and hugging me around the knees all the way through.

Of course, I did not know until I saw the pictures whether he made a bad appearance in the ring or not.

Despite a naturally biassed viewpoint, for the life of me I cannot see where every round after ten is not distinctly Ritchie, and in the last five rounds I was coming stronger and better every minute.

I never was more surprised or hurt when I discovered Corri had failed for the wild, demonstration of Welsh's seconds, his wife and the crowd generally.

Not for a minute do I suggest Corri was not absolutely honest in allowing Welsh to have the unanimous decision of crowds, but I do think the identical fight at home would have been a draw at the very worst.

THROUGH WITH ENGLAND.

I admit I was very sore for the first half dozen rounds and it did discourage me not a little. I cannot yet understand what was the matter with me, but somehow I could not get started at all.

Welsh undoubtedly is the cleverest defensive fighter in the world today and it was this cleverness which prevented my landing a knockout. But he certainly did less to me than I did to him in the way of actual punishment, and it seems to me that this ought to be taken into consideration when a world's championship is in question.

I'm going to remain here for the Gunboat Smith-Carpentier fight and then put in a little time in Paris and Berlin—my first visit to the Continent. After that I'll return to the United States to begin fighting wherever purses are offered.

In the meantime I'm ready to back myself for any amount up to $25,000 against Welsh in a twenty-round contest anywhere outside of England.

WELSH SAYS RITCHIE COULD WHIP MORAN AND WELLS IN SAME NIGHT

By FREDDIE WELSH.
Lightweight Champion of the World.
Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, July 9.—I understand that Owen Moran and Matt Wells at the ringside Tuesday night called Willie Ritchie a "cheese champion" and said he was the biggest bosh that ever held the championship.

The first thing I would say in this connection is that Willie Ritchie as he fought Tuesday night could take Moran and Wells in the same ring at the same time and whip both.

I am champion of the world now and can afford to express myself perhaps a little plainer than before and I dislike exceedingly these unusual newspaper suggestions that Ritchie is not a good man.

As a matter of fact my opinion is he would have beaten any lightweight living today had he fought him as he fought me.

This may sound like self-boosting but I think I have proven my right to count myself in a class by myself when it comes to defensive work, and I needed all of it to keep Ritchie from landing a knockout punch.

As it was he hit me the hardest blow that I was ever subjected to straight left to the side of my head in the thirteenth round. For a minute I saw stars and was dazed but was able to smile again to Ritchie and stall through the round.

Ritchie has improved 100 per cent since his other fight with me, and as much better than he showed in his fights with Leach Cross and Joe Rivers, both of which I saw.

After he has had another year's experience and has met a few more championship aspirants as I have, no doubt his record will entitle him to a return match with me—and whenever there is sufficient public demand for it I'll be ready.

I was full of confidence from the outset. I knew I could keep away from Ritchie, but never tried to do anything brilliant or anything in the way of giving punishment because I am too old in the game to take any chances.

WALTHOUR OUT FOR RECORD AT REVERE TRACK

Bobby Walthour of Georgia is in first place among the motor pace followers today, owing to his two straight victories over Leon Didier, the French champion, and the southern veteran declares he is out to clean up everything in sight and land the American title.

Walthour was practically signed up to race at Philadelphia next Saturday, but Manager Butler overbid the Quaker City promoters and the new champion will be seen at Revere that date in a four-cornered match against Clarence Carman, Worth, Mitten and Jimmy Moran.

Manager Butler is also trying to secure a pair of tandem teams for Saturday night, so popular did this style of racing prove on Tuesday night.

Saturday night's race will mark Mitten's first appearance at Revere this season. He has just returned from Europe, where he had wonderful success against the best paced men across the water. Mitten, it will be remembered, made a great showing in the championship races at the beach last season.

Moran's good work on Tuesday night makes it look as though he will bear watching. He would have undoubtedly won the race had he not suffered a puncture and a bad fall.

WALTHOUR SMASHES RECORD IN WINNING MOTOR-PACED RACE

NEW YORK, July 9.—Bobby Walthour again proved superior ability as a pace follower in winning the motor-paced point race at the Brighton Beach Motordrome.

The event was run in three heats at ten miles, Walthour being second in the first two heats and winning the last breaking the record of 12.12 2-5. His time was 12.05 2-5.

Walthour's total score was 11 points, Clarence Carman made second, with 10 points; Leon Didier, third, with 7 points, and Menus Bedell, fourth, with 5 points.

Goullet Wins Title in Half Over Kramer

NEWARK, N. J., July 9.—Alfred Goullet of Australia won the half-mile National professional championship race at the Newark Velodrome, owing Joe Fogler of Brooklyn into second place.

The victor swept around American champion Frank L. Kramer in the final sixth of a mile and finished more than two minutes ahead of the titleholder. Jacob Magin was fourth.

Kramer still tops the points table with 15 points, Goullet being second with 11 points.

Welsh to Become Real American

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—"After Fred wins the world's championship we will return to Los Angeles, become American citizens and live here permanently," declared Mrs. Freddie Welsh, wife of the new lightweight champion, just before she left Los Angeles for London to see her husband defeat Willie Ritchie. Welsh owns a beautiful residence at Ocean Park and also is a heavy investor in local real estate.

MITCHELL'S SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

NOT a very auspicious opening for the Red Sox, was it? A splendid crowd of more than 18,000 saw them go down to defeat twice at the hands of the Chicago White Sox. Looking over the score, one can see where several little things hurt the chances of Carrigan's men, and one or two places where the wrong thing was done, but it is easy enough to make what is known as the "second guess" in baseball.

THE serious collision between Hooper and Speaker that occurred right at the start of the opening game undoubtedly affected the team as a whole. For one thing, Speaker muffed a short fly, something he doesn't do once in a dog's age. Hooper had to retire after going to bat once. His shoulder is badly hurt, and it will probably be some days before he is able to resume playing.

Speaker limped badly after the games ended, and no doubt his sore toe strong leg is somewhat injured.

Ball players of both teams agreed that it was the worst collision between players that they ever witnessed, and all marvelled that Speaker and Hooper came out of it without more serious consequences.

YERKES' hitting was one of the features of the day. When he went up to bat toward the close of the last battle he was wildly cheered by the assembled multitude. Steve started off in the first game with a three-bagger to the centrefield bleachers. Next time up he hit the left field fence for two bags. In the seventh inning he stepped to the plate and pounded out a single to left. To wind up the first game he grounded out.

In the second battle Yerkes started with another clout for two bases that knocked some paint off the left field fence. On his next trip to the plate he beat out a sharp grounder. That ended his safe hit hitting for the day, but five hits in eight times up, including a triple and a pair of doubles, are enough.

IF Faber the White Sox have an ideal man to finish up with. He did the rescue act in both games and stopped the Red Sox rally on both occasions.

• • •

GAINER, whose pinch hit in the last inning of the last game knocked out a two-bagger close to the right field foul line. He is still suffering from Charlie horse and limped to second base. Had he been in good shape he could have made three bases on the hit.

• • •

BUCK WEAVER, the regular Chicago shortstop, who has been ill from tonsilitis for ten days, is on his way to Boston and will probably play this afternoon.

THEY hooted Ping Bodie whenever he stepped to the plate, but Ping had the last laugh most of the time. In the first game he made a two-base hit, drew a pass and sacrificed. In the second game he hit safely twice, reached first on a fielder's choice and drove in a run with a long sacrifice fly.

MANAGER CARRIGAN is a hard worker. He caught both games. More than one wondered why he didn't use Joe Wood in the second game.

WITH the Chicago in second place and playing consistently, Hank O'Day attributes much of his success to the work of the pitchers. He says he has two of the best southpaws in Big Jim Vaughn and Pierce, while he is willing to back Cheney, Lavender and Humphries against the best right-handers.

O'Day believes that the effectiveness of these pitchers is due to the fact that he is using them in rotation. Each man knows two or three days ahead when he will be sent to the mound.

ACCORDING to Russell Ford, the former Yankee pitcher, who jumped to the Buffeds, the best batsman in America today is Benny Kauff, a member of the Indianapolis Feds, who is leading the Gilmore league in hitting.

Kauff was picked up by the Yankees in 1911, when Hal Chase was manager, but the youngster was turned loose because he lacked experience. He was a natural hitter then, but Chase refused to waste any time with him. Kauff drifted to the New London club of the Eastern Association, and last season he led that league in the averages, with 345, making 176 hits in 125 games.

KAUFF accepted a Fed offer early this year and was assigned to the Hoosiers. All pitchers have been comparatively easy for him, and he also has been remarkably successful in stealing bases. He has developed into a fielder of sterling quality and is a big favorite with Indianapolis fans.

In speaking of Kauff's skill with the war club, Ford boldly asserts that the youngster would excel such hitters as Cobb, Jackson, Speaker, Collins, Daubert and others who are drawing salaries in the American and the National Leagues.

Last Tuesday I played a good joke on Bill.

I made him think he was out a whole case of that mild, mellow

Hampden Ale

I fixed up an empty case with a lot of broken glass and had Dan, the delivery driver, take it over to Bill's.

Naturally I was there to see the fun.

Bill and I were sitting on the porch and when Bill saw Dan coming with the case he began to sit up and take notice.

"There comes," he said, "24 bottles of real body-building ale. It puts grit in your nerves, sparkle in your eye—it's smooth, mild—"

Just then Dan dropped the case with a loud crash.

Bill nearly committed assault and battery right there and it took us almost ten minutes to explain the joke.

He didn't forgive us until the real case of Hampden came and was sampled.

Bill says this is what telephones were made for. Call up your dealer at once for a case of mild, mellow Hampden Ale.

BRAVES CALL A SUDDEN HALT TO THE CHICAGO CUBS' MAD RACE FOR FIRST PLACE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

DOUBLE DEFEAT BY WHITE SOX PROVES A BITTER DOSE FOR THE CARRIGAN SOX CREW

SOX BATTLE TO GET BACK WITH LEADERS

By NICK FLATLEY.

The cantankerous Chicago White Sox this morning, proud possessors of second place in the American League standing, will pestilence again out at Fenway Park today. Naturally the Red Sox will be the other side of the display. In fact, if they wish to stay up there where the going is good, they had better assume to themselves the leading part in said display.

The White Sox were fourth yesterday before they started to make trouble out at the Carrigan ball yard. When they punched the time clock along about sunset, they had a couple of games stored away in the locker, also they had taken a flying leap over the Detroit and Cleveland aggregations. They like the sensation on their own admission and are now set to try and hop past the Athletic outfit.

The members of the Carrigan club on the other hand, feel something like the girl who gets a box of candy instead of a sparkler from the leading man on Xmas. Rather surprised. They had expected to wreak revenge for the trouncing the Callahans administered them out in the city championship game. They had themselves all figured out a little bit closer to the Mackmen.

Now though they're wondering if they can work through to an even break in the two days that are left of the White Sox party.

NOT OUT OF IT YET.

The race is still tight enough to suit anybody. The Red Sox, too, are close enough to jump on the band wagon if they can find a little more of the old fighting spirit.

Here's the way the contenders stand going into today's mix-up:

	W.	L.	Pct.	Behind Leader
Athletics	44	28	.611
Chicago	40	33	.548	4 games
Detroit	41	35	.539	4 games
Washington	40	42	.541	4½ games
St. Louis	36	36	.526	5½ games
Red Sox	39	38	.513	6½ games

Had the Red Sox won both games yesterday they would now be less than a game away from second. They certainly should have hammered out a win over Jones in the initial game, the first nine up reached first in six of the ten innings, but have in two instances he never made the platter. The old punch was lacking.

The second game was made a heart breaker by a belated rally in the eighth. But the contest should have been stowed away long before that. Unless the Carrigans get a little more fight and get it quick, they'll wake up and find themselves out of it.

This present home stand gives them a great opportunity. Yesterday's double disaster does not kill it. There's still the chance. And the fans know. The fact that more than 15,000 turned out yesterday showed that fact up very clearly.

JOE WOOD WILL PITCH.

Several of the players are still a bit under the weather, but the whole squad will soon be ready to get working together. Speaker and Hooper fortunately, will experience no lasting effect from their beaning spell soon. Lewis and Gainer are pretty near fit. Like Wilson Gardner. All that's needed is the punch. It's up to Uncle Bill Carrigan to produce it.

So far as today's game goes, Joe Wood looks like the natural pitching selection for the Red Sox. He was rested since last Friday, when he forced back the Senators in a hard ten-inning fray, and he should be able to wreck the spurs of the Conskeags.

Against him Death Valley Jim sends out Eddie Cicotte, who used to star for the Red Sox some time ago, until someone discovered that he had a knuckle ball and no surprised him that he fell into a slump, will essay the hurling. Both of the pair have the regular White Sox winning habit. So it won't be a good pitching duel seems stated.

While it's under way, also, the Athletics will be going to the mat against the Tigers, and the Browns will probably be facing the Griffiths in the Capital.

Ed Crump Wins Stake.

AQUEDUCT RACE TRACK, N. Y. July 9.—The Tremont Stake for 2-year-olds at six furlongs with a value of $2,500 an Aqueduct feature was won by Ed Crump by half a length. Lady Barbary was second and Trial By Jury third.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

JOE CONNOLLY OF THE BRAVES IS GOING to have a harder time getting into the game than he had in getting out of it. He is a fast base runner and covers a lot of ground in the outfield.

JOHNNY ROBERTSON IS A MEMBER OF the Braves' pitching squad by New League standards. He has appeared in 8 games as a relief pitcher, and has been on the slab for 16 innings, giving him an average of .37.

DOMITZKY OF THE REDS IS HAVING the most successful season with the stick of any pitcher in the National League. He is batting .333 and has driven in seven runs. He is a better batter than he is a pitcher.

MANY THINK JOSH DEVORE HAS FOUND a home with the Reds and that he will be seen playing with the Cincinnati team next season. Devore is batting .300 and is covering a lot of ground in the outfield. He has the reputation of being a good man to have around the club.

THERE SEEMS A WASHINGTON YOUNGSTER every year who promises to be some pitcher. This year Johnson has a find in Ayers, who has been pitching winning baseball for the Senators.

THE CLUTCH OUTS OF THE BROWNS AND Cubs have had to put the St. Louis Reds and Cubs in the first division, and one more clutch outing of the Cubs will wipe Boston off the map. Clutch outs of the Braves have been surprising almost as regularly as clutch hits.

"BOBBY BURNS IS THE ONLY MEMBER of the Washington team who has been playing ball since 1902," said a baseball fan. "Burns is batting .250 this season."

A SHARK OF WASHINGTON ONCE BATED Ty Cobb while batting with the Detroit star. He said Cobb was unnerved nearly with the razzing he received from the Washington fan. Cobb is the two leading sluggers in the league with batting doubles.

BASEBALL MAY NOT HAVE THE HIGHEST batting average among the pitchers, but he hits a harder load any other pitcher.

Rollo Fagan Hero of Big Maine Game

HALLOWELL, Me., July 9.—Rollo Fagan, the Waterville High school pitcher, is the greatest schoolboy in the State today, following a brilliant performance in which he struck out 18 batters, pitched a no-hit game and batted out a home run with the bases filled. Fagan's performance was the feature of the annual field day of the Maine Interscholastic Athletic Association, which was held on the Hallowell baseball field this afternoon. Fagan's team, Waterville High school, won the championship of the association by defeating Lewiston High school, 7 to 4.

Fagan's home run was made in the fifth inning, when the bases were filled with Waterville players. The ball was batted over the left field fence, and the three runners scored ahead of it. Fagan struck out 18 batters during the game, and allowed only three hits. He also batted out a single in addition to his home run.

The Yellow Ticket

Russia's Persecution of the Jews Fully Exposed

Adapted from the play presented by A. H. Woods at the Eltinge Theatre, New York City, and written by Michael Morton.

(Novelized)

By A. A. WATERBURY

"Yes, that is right—we are both concerned. That makes us partners, doesn't it?"

Rolfe smiled cheerfully at his "partner" and drew his chair a bit nearer with the air of confidence that one sees among fellow directors who are seeking to plan how most advantageously to "cut a melon."

"Inasmuch as we are partners in this business, it wouldn't be fair to me to keep my transactions secret from you. I have received a letter from Miss Mirrel."

THE BARGAINING

"What did she say?"

"That——" began Rolfe and then as if recollecting himself, he puffed a few rings into the chill air of the room and interrupted himself. "Oh, say—look here—you know you have got to give up something."

"What!" thundered Zoubatoff either in indignation or in failure to understand the American idiom of "You've got to give up something."

"Let me see Miss Mirrel—and I will show you her letter"—bargained Rolfe ingenuously.

"I am not a conjuror—I can't produce a rabbit out of an empty hat," protested the Chief with specious innocence.

"I don't ask you to do any tricks, Monsieur Zoubatoff. I only ask you to show me what you have got up your sleeve. You don't deny she is here, do you?"

"Supposing she is—what then?"

"What charge are you holding her on?" asked Rolfe.

"You are not in an American police court, Mr. Rolfe," replied Zoubatoff with a cool appreciation of stubbornly hoping the Okrana could uphold its tyrannical dignity.

"I know that, Monsieur Zoubatoff—that's why I asked the question."

"Do you wish this information for yourself—or for your paper?"

Rolfe controlled his anger at the insinuation that he could be weakfathering at a moment when a girl's life depended upon the loyalty of her friends. He knew what worlds away the American spirit was from the Russian, not only in its interpretation of chivalry, but also in its idea of the humanness of the race of Jews.

"For myself," he replied quietly.

"You seem very much interested in this girl," sneered Zoubatoff.

"Very."

"You surprise me. An American journalist, who no doubt has had varied experiences in life, to be so interested in a girl with a Yellow Ticket—a girl of the underworld."

Julian Rolfe rose. He flicked his cigarette to the floor with a vindictive force that he would have preferred to use upon Zoubatoff.

"Monsieur Zoubatoff, I know all about that Yellow Ticket, and I know all about Anna Mirrel. What I want to know is—by what charge are you holding her?"

"That will remain in the secret archives of the Okrana," said Zoubatoff, with an air that he felt would now even this flippantly smart-aleck young whippersnapper of a journalist.

"Indeed!" said the "whippersnapper." "That is where you make one great big mistake. I know why you are holding her."

"Why?"

HIS BOMBSHELL

Rolfe exploded his bombshell in a dry tone that would have served better for a charge of arson or burglary than the indictment that he knew this girl was accused of the murder of the dead Chief of the Okrana.

"For the murder of Baron Andrey," said he.

Zoubatoff ignored the implication.

"Mr. Rolfe, whatever Anna Mirrel has written you is of no value. She doesn't know what happened after she left the Barnaul house last night as you read in the papers."

The interruption came from Count Rostov, who took up the thread of discussion with a cutting voice that was no less related to the friendly spirit Rolfe had come to expect from him. But he was beginning to find how firmly banded together were the Russian authorities against the foreign invasion.

"My uncle died this morning after an operation for appendicitis," concluded the Count.

Rolfe studied his informer with unwavering gravity.

"Did he really?"

No woman in like situation could have refrained from an audible sniff. But Rolfe went on with undisturbed calmness that suggested he did not doubt his own ability to master the situation.

"Well, I won't disagree with you about that. I don't want a scandal any more than you do. And if Baron Andrey's reputation is worth the life of a good girl I say for heaven's sake let it be sacrificed and let the girl go."

"Mr. Rolfe—you must not come here and dictate to us!" commanded Zoubatoff coldly.

"I am not dictating—I am only"—began Rolfe—but Count Rostov was determined that some semblance of credit be given to this farce he meant to play out before the little world that knew the real underlying tragedy.

"In order to verify our statements here is the death certificate," continued the Count.

"For Heaven's sake, why try to keep this thing up with me?" chanced the American with rising impatience.

"Mr. Rolfe, you are insulting," protested the chief mourner.

"I don't mean to be—but a dozen certificates would not convince me that you are not trying to cover the case of a cur with the skin of a——"

"The Long Way 'Round, and the Short"

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

By NELL BRINKLEY

DAN has two ways of getting to a wedding—the long and the short of it; one's the "long way 'round," and it takes him years—on his stubby legs—to get there. His Man and his Girl waded the long grass together when he wore a gimham shirt and a pair of home-made breeches held by a single 'spender, and she had dimples in her knees and wore a hat with a loose loop of straw a-floppin' up and down and little aprons that tied in a sagging bow behind. They played together—and the years wore by—and they worked together—and birthdays piled up—and they dreamed together—and all a sudden these two who had tramped the same trail for Youth's whole lifetime clasped their hands tighter and drifted into sweethearting. And the wedding—the end of a long chumship that neither could remember the beginning of, with candles and the deep boom of the organ and the golden throated peal of bells—put the loop of gold about two youngsters whom years had already welded into one.

AND THE OTHER—Is a short cut to the same thing, and though I ought to pull a long face and say this never works out right—I don't dast—because when I count up all I know of the two ways of Dan's romance-building I find just as many "they lived happy ever afters" jotted to the credit of one as the other. Dan doesn't waste on the short cut. A Man and a Maid may meet on the tip-top of a wave of the Sea of Life, swimming hard and fancy-free, strangers utterly, he never dreaming that her sweet-face, finished and grown, was atop of the earth; she never getting in the span of her youth even a rumor that his clean face, with steady eyes and big mouth, was bobbing round somewhere in the waste of water. Face to face on the shouldering wave ONE DAY—and the NEXT they're married. The Long Way Round Ans The Short Cut!

Mr. Norman Angell should be interested in the calculations made by Professor Tsankoff, of the Sofia University, regarding the cost to Bulgaria of the Balkan Wars. He estimates the total expenditure, including the capitalization of the sums to be expended in pensions, at roughly, $250,000,000, while the value of the territory ceded to Roumania is assessed at a further $300,000,000. Add to that the death of over 6 per cent. of the adult male population, the picked adults, be it noted, and it may well be asked if the game was worth the candle.

It is told of a horse belonging to Captain Watson of Ardow, Mull, Scotland, that it lost a shoe, and, managing to get out of the field where it was grazing, traveled a considerable distance to a blacksmith. He was astonished to find the horse standing in front of the door holding up a foreleg. It was shod, and then galloped back, happy, to its field.

CHAPTER VI.

The End of the Game

WHEN Durand, the registrar, reached his home he was met inside the door by two strange men who held two revolvers levelled at him and commanded him to do as he was told. The old man, frightened out of a year's growth, was only too willing to obey, and hastily wrote out a resignation from the duty of registrar, yielding the position for fifteen days to a citizen proxy of the Office of War. The citizen proxy was no other than the chevalier himself, or rather the citizen Dixmer. Both were in league with the scheme.

Having accomplished what they wanted in this respect, Dixmer, having escaped miraculously from the burning house, paid a visit to his wife, who was packing up her chosa preparatory to going away with Maurice Lindey. The little song that she had been singing died on her lips as she looked up to find her husband in the room. Her happiness had indeed been short lived. Dixmer made no remark; his presence there was of enough importance without the aid of speech. He wrote a few lines to Lindey which he left on the table.

"You have buried me too quickly. I am coming to claim my right. Later I shall consider a fit punishment to make you pay for your treachery."

"And now you will come with me, madam," he said, turning to Genevieve. And Genevieve followed him without a word; there was nothing else for her to do. Needless to say that Lieutenant Lindey, returning to the house some time later, nearly went wild with fear and anxiety for the woman he loved, and, indeed, there was need for it. Dixmer had decided on a desperate plot to save the queen. Realizing that Genevieve hated him and would welcome anything that might free her of him forever, he planned to use his wife in his new attempt, and with this idea in mind he dispatched a note to the Chevalier.

"Your sister consents to sacrifice her life, if need be, to save the queen. This is the only chance left us. Clothe yourself in this dress, which will permit you to join me at the prison de Conciergerie."

After this incidents happened in quick succession. Genevieve was with her husband in the prison when the Chevalier arrived. Between the outer room, where Dixmer had his office as Registrar, absolutely unsuspected, and the queen's cell, there was just one room, where two special guards kept watch. In some way Genevieve must reach the queen without attracting the attention of these men. It did not seem such a hard proposition, for the two were playing cards and drinking in a jolly fashion, and Genevieve, picking up the bundle of clothes which she was to deliver to the queen, crept stealthily across the floor. Everything might have gone well, but in her hurry to reach the queen Genevieve hurried a little more than she should have and the swish of her dress across the floor as she disappeared into the cell was heard distinctly by one of the men, who stopped to listen. The next minute the two had rushed into the cell, but Dixmer was prepared for this, and he and the Chevalier were upon them in an instant.

Again all might have gone well but the scuffle was heard by an outsider who came into the office and found no one there. The next minute the Chevalier de Maison Rouge dropped at the feet of the queen, shot through the back. His glorious career was over, and Marie Antoinette, bending down her queenly head, kissed the dying man on the forehead. For a moment there was silence in the cell, then all was wild confusion. Genevieve was arrested and Lindey was cast into prison, too, as her accomplice. Both would be sentenced to the guillotine, but in the excitement Dixmer had escaped.

Determined to effect Genevieve's escape, the crafty man betook himself once more to the Registrar's house. There at the point of a revolver he compelled Durand to write out two pardons, one for a strange woman that no suspicion might be attached to Genevieve's sudden release. Little did he know that Lorin, Maurice Lindey's best friend, had been spying on his actions, and knew what he was about to do. On the way to the prison he was stopped by a strange man and a scuffle ensued, in which the older man was worsted. Dixmer had at last yielded up his life. Lorin, with the passes safely concealed upon his person, made his way swiftly to the prison. His plan was to give up his life for his friend, so that he and Genevieve might leave the prison together. According to the prison regime the one who brought the passes must stay. Then he (Lorin) would stay. After all, what had he to live for as compared with the love that those bore each other? And with this thought in mind, proceeded to the prison with a smile on his lips, glad to give up his life for his friend and the woman he loved. Greater love hath no man than this.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A lively Irishman was once invited to a large dinner party in Dublin in hope that he would amuse and divert his host's guests. But from the beginning to the end of the dinner he preserved a solemn and serious face. The host thought this very strange.

"Why, old fellow," he remarked, "I don't believe the biggest fool in Ireland could make more laughs than you."

"Try," was the wit's cutting rejoinder.

Their Relative Values

She had been hinting for some time that she needed an extended holiday, and at last came to the point.

"You know, Henry, I have been most economical all the year, and I do really think I deserve a holiday now, don't you?"

"My dear," answered hubby, clearing his throat, "I should be glad for your sake for you to have a holiday. You know my one wish in life is to make you happy, and give you everything you want. But, as a matter of fact, I have to meet an I. O. U. for $200 at the end of this week, and I really can't afford to pay for your trip just now."

She gave him one withering glance. "Please yourself, Henry," she answered, "but if you think the man to whom you owe this money can give you a worse time than I can, you're out, that's all."

A week later she was on the trip.

To Free Your Skin of Hair or Fuzz

(Bazaar Secret)

No toilet table is complete without a small package of delatone, for with it hair or fuzz can be quickly banished from the skin. To remove hair you merely mix into a paste enough of the powder and water to cover the objectionable hairs. This should be left on the skin about 2 minutes, then rubed off and the skin washed, when all will be found free from hair or blemish. Be sure you get genuine delatone.

Mlle. Eve Lavalliere, favorite light comedy artist of the Theatre des Varieties of Paris, says: "Savon Cadum is excellent for the skin and for beautifying the complexion."

Savon Cadum, the great French Complexion soap, is made in France by Louis Nathan, 3 Rue Scribe, Paris. This distinguished chemist has succeeded in making a soap that meets the rigid requirements of what modern science has specified a toilet soap should be, and its value is attested by the fact that it has the largest sale of any complexion soap in France, a country famous for its fine soaps. The use of Savon Cadum for the toilet and bath is recommended because of its hygienic properties. It is medicated with Cadum Pomade, an antiseptic and healing agent, that acts as a soothing lotion to the most tender skin. At dept. and drug stores, 50c.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THE old gent was nearly tickled to death when he came home last night," said the Manicure Lady. "He kissed mother about ten times, the same as if they was just married, and said he had the best news in the world to tell. It seems that the boss called him in to have a little chat, and father said he felt a little goosefesh, because the way times is now quite a few high-priced men is getting their heads lopped off. But the boss didn't want to fire father. I should say not. He told father that if he could stick it out another year—and you bet father can do that—father could retire on full pay for the rest of his life. It is a new rule that the boss has just made, and if you don't think father was tickled to death you can't think at all, George. Mother was delighted, too, of course, even though she could tell with a glance and a smell that dear old dad had been celebrating his good news with a few of his old cronies."

"I am glad to hear it," said the Head Barber. "Of course, any man who has worked that hard and that long for a firm kind of deserves a pension; but how many firms does it? Not many, and I am glad your father's firm is one of them."

"Yes, and I am glad," said the Manicure Lady. "Father has been a hard worker ever since he was a young fellow about eighteen, and it will please ma and me to see him resting up in his old age and getting the old envelope just the same. Wilfred said that he was delighted, and said he was going to get a job with some such concern and work so hard and faithful that when he got along in years they would do the same by him as father's firm does."

"I don't know about that," remarked the Head Barber. "From what you have told me about him, I don't believe he could ever stick at anything long enough to get to the pension age."

"That's what I told him," said the Manicure Lady. "I reminded him that nothing in his past showed none of them steady qualities which usually endears a man to a corporation, but he said that now he has a incentive to roll, and is going to turn over a new leaf. Nothing in the world would please my brother better than to draw a salary every month without working for it. That would be the height of his ambition, and maybe, with that in view, he may settle right down to hard work, though goodness knows I have every reason to doubt it. He has just had a new ballad published and got a little check from the publisher, and he feels tickled with that, too, but he says that won't turn him away from his purpose to get a job like the one father has and work up to a pension."

"What is the ballad?" asked the Head Barber.

"Oh, I don't think much of it," replied the Manicure Lady. "The title of it is 'Where the Bean Vines of Wisconsin Throw Their Shade,' and the chorus of it goes like this:

"Oh, he journeyed far away
From the girl he won that day
And in England he did wed a wealthy maid;
And no more he ever spoke
To the girl whose heart was broke
Where the bean vines of Wisconsin throw their shade."

"He won't make no money with that song," declared the Head Barber.

"I know it," said the Manicure Lady, "but if he can get a pension some day, what is the difference?"

Might Have Done It

Judge—Did you, last night, really call this man imbecile and idiot?

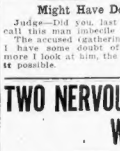
The accused (gathering his wits)—I have some doubt of it; but the more I look at him, the more I think it possible.

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I wrote to the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was feeling up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do what you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY BOWERSOX, 219 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.



Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with 'nervous prostration.' I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my left shoulder blade. I was under the care of different doctors, but did not improve. I was so weak I could scarcely stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

For over thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulcerations, tumors, irregularities, etc.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks ruled stronger this afternoon than when trading began. They were in demand upon recession and bears soon ceased to put much vigor into bidding. They had hoped to bring about a strong reaction by hammering timidly. The latter remained weak. By afternoon Missouri Pacific was off ¼, and Denver & Rio Grande preferred 1¾. Chesapeake & Ohio had failed to fully recover. It was then off a point at 49¾, having touched 48¾. After declining nearly a point New York Central was showing ⅛ gain. New Haven was well above its low, but off ½ at 62. Minor declines registered fractionally because of its poor earnings and big expenditures. Canadian Pacific likewise eased off.

But gains were many and included Southern Pacific, Reading, Northern Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Big Sandy, Delaware & Hudson, Lackawanna, Southern Railway, Kansas City Southern, Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific, Iowa Central, Kansas City Southern preferred, Mexican Central, Mexican National, Southern Railway preferred, Big Sandy, Virginia-Carolina Chemical, Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred

Mr. Jones as Seen by Himself and Pictured by the President

The difficulties encountered by the President in completing his Federal Reserve Board call renewed attention to his singular facility for self-deception. From a false assumption, based on no discernible facts whatsoever, Mr. Wilson has often built up a fabric of opinion and positive conviction which he stands ready to defend with every political weapon at his command. With absolutely no intent to deceive, he builds up an edifice of error which deceives no one so much as himself.

He is a victim of intellectual auto-intoxication, the germ of which is usually some idea so firmly imbedded in his mind that the most complete and overwhelming proof will not dislodge it, or convince the President of its falsity.

Take for example the case of Mr. Thomas D. Jones of Chicago, nominated by the President for member of the Federal Reserve Board. The public knew nothing of Mr. Jones, but quickly learned that he had been one of the organizers of the Zinc Trust, and was one of the directors of the Harvester Trust against which the United States is taking legal action.

Straightway Mr. Wilson prepared and gave to the public a picture of Mr. Jones, as he imagined him—not as he knew him, for the Jones of the presidential portraiture never existed. Jones himself testifies to that effect.

But despite Jones the President continues to insist that the Jones of his fancy is the true Jones, and holds it little short of lese majeste that the Senatorial Committee should hesitate to recommend the particular Jones who has displayed himself.

Consider this portrait of Jones in his capacity as a trust director as limned by the kindly Wilson brush.

"His connection with the Harvester Company is this: He owns one share, and only one share, of stock in the company, which he purchased to qualify as a director. HE WENT INTO THE BOARD OF THE HARVESTER COMPANY FOR THE PURPOSE OF ASSISTING TO WITHDRAW IT FROM THE CONTROL WHICH HAD LED IT INTO THE ACTS AND PRACTICES WHICH HAVE BROUGHT IT UNDER THE CRITICISM OF THE LAW OFFICERS OF THE GOVERNMENT, AND HAS BEEN VERY EFFECTIVE IN THAT CAPACITY. His connection with those acts and practices is absolutely nil. His connection with it was a public service, not a private interest, and he has won additional credit and admiration for his courage in that matter."

A veritable Sir Galahad of anti-trust champions was Jones in the Wilson estimation. He joined the crew of the piratical Harvester craft only to blow her up, heedless though he should be lost in the resultant explosion. What wonder that with this picture of the heroic Jones firmly fixed in his mind—which had created it out of nothing—President Wilson should conclude by assuring Senator Owen, as to this particular nominee for the Reserve Board:

"He is the one man out of the whole number who was in a peculiar sense my personal choice."

To contrast with the presidential portrait of Mr. Jones we have that gentleman's own story of his relations to the Harvester Trust as officially reported by Senator Hitchcock. This, then, is the real Jones:

"Mr. Jones said he was a director of the International Harvester Company, was elected in April, 1909, but only owned one share of stock, which was purchased to qualify him as a director. He only became a director to oblige Cyrus McCormick, who is a lifelong friend of his. He FULLY APPROVED all acts of the company since he became a director in 1909, believing them proper and within the law. He said he was IN FULL ACCORD with the policy of the company. There has been no difference of opinion among the directors."

Obviously, then, no sense of public duty lured Mr. Jones into the Harvester directorate. He sought to reform no evils. His voice was in full accord with the directors who took action which the United States is attacking in the courts. The protege of Cyrus McCormick, the king trust magnate of them all, he "fully approved" all that was done by the trust directors.

Thus the imaginary Jones whom the President says he has known intimately for fifteen years, proves to be of the stuff dreams are made of. No one believes the President deliberately intended to deceive the Senate. The incident merely throws further light on a trait in his character which makes too ready acceptance of his most solemn statements sometimes perilous.

The President's convictions on business matters are sometimes as fallible as his knowledge of men. He was, and is, very sure that the business of the country is in a most flourishing condition, that we are on the eve of "a boom of business in this country such as we have never witnessed in the United States."

Holding this view—which like his portrait of Jones was purely the child of his fancy—the President asked E. C. Simmons, a merchant of St. Louis, to be a member of the Federal Reserve Board. Mr. Simmons declined. In the course of the discussion aroused by the appointment, Mr. Simmons said:

"The newspapers quote the President as saying business is as good as usual for this time of the year. With the greatest possible respect for him, I say he does not know as much about that as I do. I know that business conditions are very poor, although they are better now than they were a month ago, and even in the last week business has improved considerably."

Just as Jones—who ought to know—disagreed with the Wilson estimate of Jones, so Simmons, a business man, in whom the President has confidence enough to seek to make him a member of the most important business board in the country, takes issue with his estimate of business. But it is quite apparent that the President is serenely confident still that things are so when he thinks them so.

It is not impossible that those "matters of greater gravity and nearer consequence" with which President Wilson seriously closed his appeal for the repeal of the Panama tolls act may have existed in his mind with perfect clarity. Later inquiry showed that they existed nowhere else. They were as purely creations of his fancy as the anti-trust heroism of Jones, or the business boom which Simmons failed to find.

The fabled sculptor who worshipped the creation of his art was able to breathe life into the insensate marble. The President's lively and artistic imagination creates an illusion only for himself.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Bringing in the Sheaves!

THOUGH Villa's hard on Huert a's heels; though Haiti is in Dutch;
Though there is great and pressing need for protocols and such;
Though manifold affairs of state are unattended to,
Those burdensome "fixed charges" bills will soon be falling due.
And as a cruel government won't bear his grievous load—
It's ho! to rake the shekels in! The Doc is on the road!

THAT English footman who adorns the Doc's household array
Will never drop another H unless he gets his pay.
The mansion at Miami needs a new garage or two,
And on the Lincoln farm there toils a hungry harvest crew.
So "Dig for Dollars" is the word; forget the chance of war—
The Doc has joined the yodlers in the dear old tent once more.

NO troubles save of high finance disturb his slumbers now.
Let his great office run itself—it always has somehow!
And in a few years more, perhaps, not one of us can tell,
He may not have the lofty job that makes him draw so well.
Ah! reap the harvest while we may! Though war's wild tocsin sounds
And there is work in Washington, the Doc is on his rounds!

Why Not a Device to Electrify the Audience Also?

A music hall manager has charged the stage dressing rooms with electric currents in order to buck up the actors. He says that the electricity will make them think of bright things to say. Inasmuch as the actors say what they learn to say, he might save a lot of trouble by subjecting some of last year's almanacs to the treatment.

He Got Off Light

The Alabama negro who was sentenced to fifty years' imprisonment for stealing fifty cents from another negro was probably very grateful that he didn't steal the money from a white man.

He's Learning Fast

Huerta modelled his election on the Bryan mediation plan. He wrote the verdict first.

Almost Worth Getting Out an Extra

The big news item in yesterday's papers told how one ship didn't hit another in a fog.

Not So Encouraging

The cheerful promise of the headline, "Four Billion Eggs Distributed Free by the Government," diminishes in cheerfulness when you find in the next line that they are all fish eggs.

Supertaxation

In Pennsylvania men are fined sixty-seven cents each for swear words. Soon it will be impossible for any Pennsylvanians to own automobiles save Bill Flinn, Boies Penrose and Gifford Pinchot.

With the Deaf and Dumb Alphabet?

"His throat is not in good shape and I fear we have all got to join hands in insisting that he take care of it."—George W. Perkins.

Very Loud Language, Indeed

"Suspicions that anarchist demonstrations in Europe result from pilots hatched in this country seem unreasonable. American anarchists prudently draw the line at highly explosive bursts of oratory."—Washington Star.

That must have been some burst of oratory that wrecked three stories of a brick tenement in New York city.

Nothing to Brag Of

Although Americans drank less whiskey last year than the year before, they smoked a lot more cigarettes, which doesn't give the optimist much opportunity.

Where the Big Money Goes

The Standard Oil's payroll for New York is $4,513,309. The figures for the District of Columbia would be more interesting.

In-Shoots

Do not try to live on the reputation of your grandfather. Let father do it.

Never spend time in argument, unless it is to separate some one from his cash.

The grouch can never understand why anyone should enjoy life.

It is better if you are in business to advertise in time. The sheriff's sale rates are always higher than any other.

When a candidate makes too much noise in a campaign he sometimes scares votes away.

Stars and Stripes

No man was ever known to worry over the fact that he was a fool, no matter how sincerely his friends have grieved.

Carnegie, in planning $500,000,000 gift for additional public libraries, shows a deep solicitude that the poor may have something to read.

Coney Island bans one-piece bathing suits. Shocking!

Cutting off Mexico City's water supply doesn't worry Huerta.

Wilson would "share United States advantages with the whole world." Does he mean to include Americans?

Sanitary Science—Automobiles, Despite Their Noise and Odors, Do a Whole Lot to Exterminate Flies and Mosquitoes by Distributing Oil on the Streets

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

DID you ever stop and think of the wonderful sanitary effects of some of our modern inventions?

The Trolley Cars and the Automobile, for instance.

If you live in a large city, and have reached two score years, you perhaps recall the time when cars were drawn by wretched over-worked horses; and horses and mules and donkeys were the moving power of all vehicles.

And you must remember how much more prevalent insects of all kinds were in those days.

You must remember how littered were the streets, and how swarms of insects followed in the wake of all this litter. Out in country places it was the same; and where there were no street cleaners, and around farm houses, where the people were too busy with their compelling labors to tidy up the yards, most unhygienic conditions existed.

Aside from the elimination of the animal in labor, there comes the casting of oil on the troubled ways of dust.

Many country homes, giving on public thoroughfares, which were almost uninhabitable in dry seasons by the clouds of dust which passing vehicles raised, are made comfortable and free from such annoyances by the oiled streets, which have come as a result of automobile needs.

Not only does oil lay the dust, but it helps eliminate the mosquito.

Oil Companies the Bane of the Lives of Insects

That insect cannot abide the thought of the Standard Oil, or any other oil.

The trust does not trouble him so much as the odor.

In fact, the mosquito would be very glad if a trust were formed which brought the price of oil up to a prohibitory rate.

It is whispered that a Congress of Mosquitoes is about to take place all along the Jersey coast, in order to discuss ways and means to arrest this destroying influence of Oil, which is bringing the birth rate of the mosquito to such a low degree that it threatens the extinction of the whole family.

In a recent periodical a physician wrote a series of interesting articles on the causes of disease. Here is something he said about the fly:

"YES, let's get rid of the Fly. But in the name of all that is decent, let's be HONEST about it, and not act under false pretenses, shams and fraud.

Here are some FACTS to ponder.

The House Fly IS NOT the cause of Disease.

The "Germ" IS NOT the cause of Disease.

The House Fly, like all other created things, exists because THE CONDITIONS SUITABLE FOR ITS EXISTENCE OBTAIN.

Diseases exist for precisely the same reasons.

If the Fly and Disease exist at the same time,

If the Fly exists because of unsanitary conditions.

If Diseases exist because of unsanitary conditions.

Then, naturally, they both exist because of the same reason.

A Calm—

"Germs" of disease exist ONLY WHERE THERE IS DISEASE.

"Germs" of disease and Disease are co-incident.

"Germs" of disease exist because the conditions are suitable for their existence.

"GERMS" of disease are the RESULT, not the CAUSE of disease.

"Germs" of disease exist and LIVE only in the diseased body; they cannot exist and live in the healthy body.

Sanitation Is the Only Way to Prevent Disease

SANITATION is the only COMMON SENSE, LOGICAL, SCIENTIFIC method of preventing Disease.

SANITATION has abolished many Diseases in many communities.

SANITATION is Man's application of Nature's methods of disposing of the waste products of the processes of life, intensified and quickened, producing in a short time results for which Nature requires indefinite time, viz: the breaking up of organized organic matter into its original Lavoiserian Elements.

Let us have SANITATION in its true sense, forgetting the fads, follies, prejudices, inconsistencies, ignorance and foolishness, and we shall soon get rid of the Flies, for then there will be nothing for them to do, and, incidentally, the majority of the Doctors will be in the same fix as the Fly.

True, there have been great advances in preventing and treating disease. BUT THESE ADVANCES ARE DUE TO SANITARY SCIENCE, and have no relation to the "Germ Theory of Disease," except as falsely credited thereto. The History of these years proves the statement.

H. HITCHCOCK, M. D.

So we can understand how our modern inventions are helping the cause of Sanitary Science. With all the noise, and the unpleasant odors and the accidents which accompany the Automobile, it has been a wonderful factor in cleaning up the world.

Cleanliness the Quickest Road to Good Health

And as we read Dr. Hitchcock's words, we ought to realize how important it is to keep in touch with God's second next law to Godliness—the law of cleanliness.

Clean thoughts, clean words, clean bodies, clean homes, clean cities and country places, mean HEALTH.

Disease cannot exist where all things within and without are CLEAN.

Instead of losing our heads over fool fads, and medicine fads and operation fads and serum fads, let us keep our heads and KEEP CLEAN.

War a wage against every kind of uncleanliness.

Do Ocean Levels Vary?

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q. "Is there any difference in sea level between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans? If so, which ocean is sea level on. Does the rule, 'water finds its own level,' apply to the two oceans?"

A. Water surely seeks its level. This is one law of nature, at least, that was discovered by men before the discovery of mathematics. If the air surrounding the earth should forever remain at rest, no winds; and if the water in all oceans was also in a state of complete rest, that is, without oceanic currents, it would be without surface waves in absence of winds, then at all places on earth of the same latitude the true surface of water would be at the same distance from the centre of the earth —that is, equal latitudes, equal levels.

But winds, currents in air and ocean streams, currents of water, greatly modify actual levels, when water comes in contact with land. If any regular current of ocean water strikes against any land, whether continent or island, the water will be backed up and rise somewhat higher than at places not so beaten by currents. But these elevations of the water are merely local, temporary and subjected to fitful changes.

The laws of gravitation, centrifugal tendency of the earth's axial rotation, shape of the earth, of islands and continents are not changed, and the water in all United States Geodetic Survey engineers make a triangulation and a measurement of all altitudes of points on a line from the Atlantic level in New Jersey to the Pacific level north of San Francisco, as they have done, and should find the water at mean height one foot, two feet or no farther from the centre of the earth in California than in New Jersey, the Pacific would appear to be higher but in a year or two repeat the process. Then the Pacific might not be any higher.

WHERE WOMEN RULE

L. F. D.—Yes, it is quite true that in certain parts of Thibet, South America, and elsewhere, the women are supreme in the management of things. They are probably the survivals of the time when women universally "bossed" the men. Such was the general condition away back in the early tribal times of which history gives us but a scanty account. The fact is beyond question, however, that woman was "boss" a long, long time before she became the "weaker vessel" and took to playing "second fiddle."
